Suicide Traced to Greed of Heartless Money Shark

Incredible Sums Paid on Small Loans, but Victims Unable to Wipe Out Their Indebtedness—Startling Expose of the Business in Next Sunday's AMERICAN.

Those who have read that wonderful description of a man's fight with a devil fish in Victor Hugo's "Toilers of the Sea" will have a good idea of the life and death struggle of the man or woman who falls a victim of the vicious loan sharks of Boston.

It is safe to say that if the voters of the State could listen to the pitiful stories that are told by those who have found themselves within the grasp of some of the remorseless small loan companies of Boston, they would march in a body to the State House on Beacon Hill and demand radical, sweeping reforms in the manner of conducting this business or wipe it off the face of the earth.

There probably are loan companies that do a legitimate business and are a benefit to the community. There certainly are many that do an illegitimate business and are a disgrace to the community.

Consider the case of William A. Taylor, a young man of No. 55 Woodward street, South Boston. There was tuberculosis in his family. His married sister died from it and left her two small children with Taylor's aged mother. The young man was the sole support of the two children and their grandmother.

Seized with a cough, Taylor feared the worst. He resolved to fight for his life so that he might provide for his mother and his sister's children. He bought a tent so that he might sleep in the open air. To buy this tent he went to A MONEY SHARK AND BORROWED $5.

Then the young man fought for his life and for the support of his loved ones. He paid back regularly on the money he had borrowed, but there was always that insistent cry: "MORE! MORE!"

One day he counted up the money he had paid on the original amount he had borrowed and found that he HAD PAID BACK $45, and that HE STILL OWED $7!

Young Taylor, to whom every cent he earned was precious because it was needed for his mother and the two children, gave up, and, tying a rope about his neck, HANGED HIMSELF.

Mrs. Clara B. Taylor, the widowed mother of this poor boy, declares that this loan concern not only KILLED HER SON, but made threats to take away her two grandchildren if she revealed the facts.

This is but one of many tragic incidents in connection with this dreadful business. The public would be amazed if they knew how many men and women are held in the VICE-LIKE CLUTCHES of the money sharks of Boston.

In most cases they are helpless against complaint, because if their employers knew it they would lose their positions.

Would you not think that it was beyond belief that a man PAID BACK $2.153 ON AN ORIGINAL LOAN OF $15? It's a fact!

Can you believe that a person has paid $4.000 on an original loan of $400, and that HE STILL OWES $850? Well, it's a fact!

The Sunday AMERICAN has joined the good citizenship of Boston in a determination to CURB THESE RUTHLESS CONCERNS. In next Sunday's AMERICAN an expose of the loan shark business will be printed that will not only shock Boston but the whole of New England.

Every man and woman, and every boy and girl, in New England will want to read this astonishing story. Order next Sunday's AMERICAN to-day and you'll get the most startling and pitiful recital that has ever been printed in a New England newspaper.

'L' YIELDS ON 50-YEAR LEASE BILL

It became known at the State House to-day that the Elevated has decided to surrender in the fifty-year lease fight.

Widespread public opposition, coupled with the attitude of Governor Foss against the long tenure announced at a conference with the Elevated representatives, has forced the Elevated to give up the idea of a fifty-year lease.

The corporation is now seeking as favorable a compromise as can be effected. It is understood among those close to the corporation affairs that the Elevated will accept a twenty-five-year lease without demur.

The latest development on the other side of the question to-day was the endorsement of Senator George Holden Tinkham's substitute bills by the Public Franchise League. This endorsement came through Joseph B. Eastman.

The Tinkham Plan.

Senator Tinkham's bills contain these four provisions: All leases to end in twenty-five years; the consolidation of the West End and the Elevated; no increase in the dividend of the West End stockholders, and the immediate construction of the Boylston street subway.

It was rumored at the State House to-day that the Elevated Railroad had given up its fight for a fifty-year lease and that it would agree to a twenty-five-year lease.

Governor Foss said to-day that he was not ready now to say anything about the matter, but might have something to say later.

The Public Franchise League sent this letter to Senator Tinkham:

League Writes Tinkham.

Hon. George Holden Tinkham:

Dear Sir—

The bills relating to the Boston transportation situation which you have offered in the Senate as substitutes for the so-called "Omnibus Bill," recently reported by a majority of the Street Railways and Metropolitan Affairs Committees, are, in the opinion of the Public Franchise League, distinctly preferable to the latter measure. Their substitution would be a decided step forward in the solution of the difficult problem confronting the Legislature. There are certain respects in which we believe your bills might be improved, and we shall take pleasure in offering suggestions to that end for your consideration in case substitution prevails; but we do not deem it necessary or advisable to complicate the situation with such suggestions until that step is taken.

Your bills are superior to the "omnibus bill" in certain vital respects:

First—They give the Elevated no vested rights in the subways and tunnels of the city of Boston extending beyond a period of twenty-five years. If that company is given by contract the sole and exclusive use for that length of time of these underground links which are absolutely essential to any surface or elevated transportation system in this city it will be treated very generously. It will have privileges vastly greater than any other street railway, gas or electric light company in the State now enjoys. There can be no reasonable excuse for tying up the future to any greater extent. Neither justice nor expediency demands it. Any such reversal of the policy which this Commonwealth has so long and so successfully followed would, we believe, be deeply resented by the people of Massachusetts and would in the end react upon the Elevated road itself to its own grave disadvantage.

Favors Consolidation.

Second—They provide for a consolidation of the West End and the Elevated, instead of an extension of the present lease. For three years public boards and the Elevated itself have been urging consolidation of the two systems. No one, until very recently, has favored an extension of

B. & N. INNOCENT IN DYNAMITE CASE

The full bench of the Supreme Court today handed down a decision ruling that the Boston & Northern Street Railway Company was not responsible for damages growing out of the Melrose dynamite explosion in 1904, when several persons were killed. A car struck a fifty-pound box of dynamite which fell off an express team. The court overruled the exceptions of Addie and Thomas Higwood and Charles E. Butterfield, who sued for damages for injuries. This was a test case. Suits brought against the city of Melrose on ground of negligence were lost by the parties who brought them.

GAY CLASS DAY FOR HARVARD

Educated men who do not enter public life were hailed as selfish egoists by the class orator; the odist sang his praises of the graduate's debt to the university; the poet read his call to his classmates to go forth into the world and fight the good fight with courage and love, and then the ivy orator jested at college life, and all these things took place at the class day exercises at Harvard to-day.

It was the 275th class day in the history of the university, and for gayety and joyousness it has never been excelled. The crowd of visitors was one of the largest ever received at the university.

The exercises to-day began with the procession of seniors in cap and gown, headed by a band, into Sanders Theatre, where the formal exercises of Class Day began at 11 o'clock.

There the class ode was read by William Chase Greene of Baltimore. It was as follows:

The Class Ode.

Kindly Mother, to-day we would ask of thy grace
Thy serene benediction once more;
In the pride and the strength of our light-hearted youth,
With a laugh we fling open the door.
We have toiled in thy halls, we have dreamed in the dawn
Of a day that is golden with mirth,
Till exultant, and free, and impatient we go
To the strife that is shaking the earth.

Yet through all the tumultuous noon of the years
In our feverish hearts we shall know
That thy hand is above us, benignant and calm,
Unreluctant its boon to bestow.

ADVERSE REPORTS ON TARIFF BILLS

WASHINGTON, June 22.—The Senate Finance Committee to-day decided to report adversely both the wool bill and the farmers' free list bill. President Taft is alarmed to-day over the danger confronting the Canadian reciprocity agreement as a result of the coup of Senate Democrats in forcing a coalition with the Republican Insurgents to bring the Underwood wool bill before the Senate. The President's attitude to-day showed that he feared that an attempt would be made to combine the Underwood wool bill and the farmers' free list into an amendment for the Canadian reciprocity measure.

GIRL SUICIDE'S PATHETIC NOTE

LOWELL, June 22.—After writing to her mother one of the most pathetic suicide letters ever composed by a girl, Miss Maude Eastman, twenty-three years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Eastman of Centralville, cast herself into the Pawtucket Canal. Her body was taken from the canal to-day.

The suicide's letter, found in a pocket of the girl's clothing on the canal bank, exonerates a Lowell young man from any responsibility for the girl's troubles and makes a sad little plea for the girl's own good name, too. It reads thus:

Mother: I am going to end it all. I am tired of living and somehow I never pleased you, no matter what I do. I haven't been so "bad" as I have been painted.

You won't have to make any trouble. I shall not be here to trouble you. I am going I don't know where, but perhaps God will make a place for me. Jim Gemmell has used me always as a gentleman. He has nothing to do with what I am about to do now. I loved him, but was trying to forget him on account of the difference in religion.

You have Ray now, he will stand by you always. He is a good boy. Be good to him and be happy. Don't worry about me. I'm tired of living, so tired. I am going to end it all. I shall meet you, but hurry and come, too. You will perhaps go to a better place than I because I shall be a "suicide." They never enter heaven.

I don't care what becomes of me now. You have cast me aside. Good bye. From your unhappy daughter,

MAUD EASTMAN, 18 May st.

The letter was written in ink and was addressed to Mrs. Eastman, No. 18 May street. Down in the corner of the letter, written in lead pencil, was this sentence:

"I am in canal."

The body was removed to one of the morgues in the city.

The "Ray" alluded to in the letter is the girl's brother. "Jim" Gemmell is the son of Charles J. Gemmell, a patrolman. Young Gemmell was at home all last evening and night, according to his father. The father also says that the Eastmans objected to James calling on Maude. Difference in religion was one cause of the opposition.

Miss Eastman was a native of this city and a Varnum School graduate. She worked in the Bigelow carpet mills.

PURE MEDICINE BILL IN THE U. S. SENATE

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Senator McCumber to-day introduced a bill amending the pure food and drugs act in accordance with the recommendations in the President's message yesterday. The bill provides that any label on a medicine package which makes a false statement of the curative qualities of the medicine shall be considered as misbranded under the act.

GREAT CROWD SEES GEORGE V. CROWNED KING

LONDON, June 22.—With regal splendor never before equalled in the history of the English nation, George V. and his consort Mary were crowned King and Queen in the historic old Westminster Abbey to-day. The crown was placed upon the King's head by the Archbishop of Canterbury at 12:37 o'clock.

The ceremony of the coronation and the accompanying pageant when their Majesties drove through the streets of London between hundreds of thousands of their cheering subjects were magnificent in their details despite unfavorable weather conditions—cloudy skies and drizzling showers.

KING TAKES THE AMENDED OATH.

King George V. is the first English King to take the new coronation oath, as modified to eliminate portions that were objected to by Catholics. The new oath is as follows:

I do solemnly and sincerely, in the presence of God, profess, testify and declare that I am a faithful member of the Protestant Reformed Church as by law established in England, and I will, according to the true intent of the enactments which are intended to secure the Protestant succession to the throne of my realm, uphold and maintain the said enactments to the best of my power according to the law.

The objectionable part of the old oath was as follows:

I do solemnly and sincerely, in the presence of God, profess, testify and declare that I do believe that in the sacrament of the Lord's Supper there is not any transubstantiation of the elements of bread and wine into the body and blood of Christ at or after the consecration thereof by any person whatsoever, and that the invocation or adoration of the Virgin Mary or any other saint and the sacrifice of the mass as they are now used in the church of Rome are superstitious and idolatrous.

Queen Near a Breakdown.

It was learned this afternoon that Queen Mary came perilously near to a nervous breakdown preceding the coronation exercises in Westminster Abbey, and once or twice during them. Strength of will power, however, kept the Queen from succumbing entirely to her feelings.

During the anointing, the anointing and crowning of King George the Queen wept, pressing her handkerchief to her eyes. Later in the ceremony she again gave way to tears. The Queen was in a highly nervous state when she entered the cathedral, although under the stress of excitement she bore up. At the time most of the spectators noticed nothing amiss.

Coronation day broke foggy and lowering, with rain threatening to spoil the pageant and ruin the decorations. There was a murky drizzle in the air when the morning salute was fired at dawn which turned at times into showers.

Despite the inclement weather the streets were alive with hundreds of thousands of people, hundreds of whom had camped out through the night to hold their points of vantage in the public stands when day dawned.

A striking incident took place just as the King and Queen were leaving Buckingham palace for the drive to the historic Abbey. As they stepped into the royal carriage the sun suddenly broke through the leaden skies, falling upon the burnished brass and glass of the ancient coach.

Again in Westminster Abbey a little later, when the King took the oath to govern his people according to the laws and customs of the land, and was proclaimed "King by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British dominions beyond the seas, King, Defender of the Faith and Emperor of India," the sun again burst through the gray clouds and fell through the high, stained windows of the abbey, bathing the impressive scene within its splendor.

The coronation passed off without untoward incident, in marked contrast with the coronation of King Edward nine years ago, when the King was weak and suffering from a recent operation, and the Archbishop of Canterbury was so weak from old age that he placed the crown on the King's head backwards and afterwards fainted.

London's Greatest Day.

Modern London had never known such a day of excitement and crowds. The colossal demonstration for the King and Queen, coming from British and foreigners alike, plainly impressed both their Majesties and they were deeply affected as they stepped from the royal carriage after the drive from Buckingham Palace to the cathedral.

The King and Queen were driven from the palace to the scene of their crowning in the ancient carriage of state, enclosed in heavy glass and gilded until the exterior shone like gold in the unexpected flash of sunlight. It was drawn by eight cream white horses from the royal stables and was flanked by outriders. The escort was the Royal Life Guards and riding near by was Lord Kitchener, commander-in-chief of the military forces of the day, and Lord Roberts, who acted in similar capacity nine years ago when Edward VII. was crowned.

The gathering and start of the coronation procession from Buckingham Palace were picturesque.

After the King and Queen had partaken of communion the royal couple were escorted into the chapel of St. Edward, where they were invested with the royal sceptres. There the King delivered the golden spurs and the sceptre of the dove to the Archbishop, and with the Queen proceeded to the disrobing rooms to be relieved of their heavy robes. Both wore their crowns in the slow processional to the disrobing room.

Back to the Palace.

The King and Queen left the Abbey at 5 minutes after 2 o'clock. Their appearance on the return procession to Buckingham Palace was the signal for another great ovation.

As the state coach passed through Parliament square it was evident to the cheering multitudes that both King and Queen had come up remarkably well under the tremendous strain of the ceremony. There was a rush on all sides to leave the seats as the procession passed back toward Buckingham Palace. Perfect system prevailed in getting the guests from the Abbey.

The procession from the Abbey was a continuous ovation, a different route being taken from that by which the Abbey had been reached. The weather had cleared up and the sun was then shining.

Salute From the Fleet.

The King and Queen arrived at Buckingham Palace at 2:47 o'clock. Although they were naturally fatigued by the long service, it was officially announced from Buckingham Palace in the afternoon that both had stood the tiresome ceremony well and had suffered no bad effects. King George's first official act after returning to the palace after being crowned was to press a button connected by cable and telegraph to St. John's, Newfoundland, which opened the ceremonies of laying the cornerstone of the Fishermen and Seamen's Home of the Grenfell Mission.

George V. has been King of England for more than a year before being crowned, a circumstance unusual in British history. Edward VII. died on May 6, 1910, consequently one year, one month and fifteen days have elapsed, during which time King George has occupied the throne without having been crowned.

The international fleet anchored off here, which will take part in the coronation naval review Saturday, fired a salute of twenty-one guns in honor of King George at noon.

Hammond Was Seventh.

John Hays Hammond, special envoy from the United States, early in the morning drove from his official residence in Piccadilly to the palace, accompanied by Lord Sandhurst. Mr. Hammond wore a light black overcoat to protect his coronation costume.

Mrs. Hammond's costume was of princess style, draped about her figure. It is composed of famous moscow brocade, in peacock blue moire antique, backed with

AVIATOR FALLS IN GREAT RACE

UTRECHT, Holland, June 22.—M. Amerigo, an aviator contesting in the circuit of Europe aviation contest for prizes aggregating $94,000, was perhaps fatally injured to-day while attempting to make the flight from Liege to this city. His monoplane capsized and Amerigo fell from a great height. Aviators Gilbert, Vidart, Garros and Conneau arrived here shortly after 10 o'clock from Liege and were greeted by huge crowds. Gilbert won to-day's race, making the 124 miles from Liege in 2 hours 3 minutes.

To-day's Race (Thursday).

Boston Marriage (Registrar McGlenen up)

Suffolk Divorce Court (Judges up).

They're off!

The race began to-day for the Matrimonial Sweepstakes.

The contestants are City Registrar "Eddie" McGlenen of the city of Boston and the Suffolk County Divorce Court.

The City Registrar is issuing marriage licenses as fast as he can. This is June, his best month for marriages.

But, to-day the Suffolk Superior Court (Divorce Sessions) started in to break all divorce records in the State. It began to unhitch couples much faster than the City Registrar can issue licenses to tie them up. Six judges sat in divorce sessions at the same time.

Never was anything like it in the divorce line, especially for conservative Massachusetts. It has Reno faded. Uncontested divorce cases are put through in this State at the rate of one every twelve minutes. One was put through once in four minutes. That case holds the record. The average, however, is twelve minutes. This means five an hour. The divorce court sits five hours a day. That's twenty-five uncontested cases per day for a single session. Court sits five days a week. That means that one judge could sit on 125 uncontested cases in one court week.

With six judges hearing divorce cases at the same time, it is posible, if all are uncontested, for 750 cases to be run through in one court week, taking twelve minutes as an average.

Last year the city registrar's office issued 8,511 marriage licenses. That was an average of 164 per week.

June is one of the best marriage license months of the year, if not the best. The weekly average is high. But it isn't high enough to offset the operations of six divorce sessions, all grinding away at the same time.

Of course, not all the cases are uncontested. There is no way of figuring the length of a contested divorce case. It may run a week. Injured husbands and wives who are fighting for divorce have a lot to tell. They have all the witnesses they can get together and each witness usually has quite a story to give in testimony. Then there is cross-examination and re-direct and re-re-direct, and what not. There's no way to figure how long it will run.

But, with so many divorce sessions on, it is figured that City Registrar McGlenen will have to issue marriage licenses with both hands to keep up with the divorce race. This multiple divorce session will not last. It may hold out only for to-day or to-morrow. At such a rate the docket will be cleared up.

Mrs. Gambier, Kiss-Hungry Wife

[illegible] sues for freedom because her husband had "insufficiently adored" her.

UNKISSED WIFE SEEKS DIVORCE

NEW YORK, June 21.—Repeatedly, with many emphatic wavings of her ivory handled fan and flashes of her big eyes, Mrs. Edith Russell Gambier repulsed the efforts of Lawyer Martin Littleton representing her wealthy, middle-aged husband, whom she is suing for a separation, to show that she is of fickle heart—efforts by which the names of two men were most mysteriously introduced into the proceedings. By consent of counsel and Justice Pendleton, who is hearing the case in the Supreme Court, the names of these men were held secret.

It only came out that one of the men was a member of the Canoe Brook Club colony of Summit, N. J., and that the other lived in handsome apartments at No. 1 West Sixty-eighth street and owned a big red automobile.

Tells of Motor Rides.

Mrs. Gambier was asked if she had not gone on long motor rides with these mysterious men, drunk cocktails with them, kissed and embraced them. She did not deny taking motor rides with them, but denied kissing, hugging and cocktail drinking.

While she was being questioned a short, stocky man, very well dressed, who had been sitting among the spectators, got up and left the court room. It was admitted he was one of the men mentioned in the case, but he was not recognized and disappeared before he could be questioned.

Young Mrs. Gambier maintained she had brought her separation suit because her husband had insufficiently kissed, petted and adored her, and that her matrimonial venture ended when he deserted her.

She Is Uniquely Pretty.

The astonishing feature of the tale is that it falls from the lips of a remarkably—indeed, a uniquely—pretty woman. No feminine witness ever sat on a witness stand who displayed a figure more trim and graceful, who attired herself with a more fetching simplicity, who looked altogether so fresh and attractive. Her hair is very black and her eyes are very deep blue.

She was asked about the honeymoon that died in the frozen zones of sentiment. While she and her husband were on their European tour she said he kissed her twice a day, morning and evening; that was all.

"Who suggested the kissing?" asked Mr. Littleton.

"Why, nobody. I simply kissed him when he kissed me."

"Didn't you ever kiss him unless he kissed you?"

"Perhaps not."

"When did you stop kissing him?"

"When he stopped kissing me."

"When did you last kiss him?"

"The second night out on our way back to New York on the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria—in our stateroom."

"Did he say anything?"

Just "Good Night."

"He said, 'Good night.'" As Mrs. Gambier emphasized it the suggestion was that Mr. Gambier had said "Good night" in the manner of one extremely bored.

"Did he say anything else?"

"No; he was merely submissive."

"Submissive?" demanded Mr. Littleton.

"Yes; he received the kiss and—and that was all."

On the steamship she met two men, she said, one of them an author, but she was sure there was no flirtation. She and her husband took apartments at the Marie Antoinette. She wanted to go to Asbury Park but he wanted to go to Summit, N. J. She yielded to his wishes, they went to the Canoe Brook Club and took a bungalow.

"How long were you there?"

"Forty days."

"And no kisses?"

"No," said the pretty witness, gently folding her fan; "life in a bungalow for forty days and no kisses."

Lawyer Littleton then asked her if she and a man had not taken a ride through Central Park and then gone late at night to his apartment at No. 1 West Sixty-eighth street, where she had remained for some time.

"That I emphatically deny," exclaimed Mrs. Gambier. She said she had only been in the apartment once with another young woman whom she was chaperoning.

Letters Are Shown.

On her behalf former Justice Van Wyck submitted a letter she had written to her husband last November stating she still loved him, would return to him and offering to forgive him for inferring in his letter to her that she must promise to live "chastely." Mr. Van Wyck then demanded and received from Mr. Littleton a packet of Gambier's letters written to his wife during his courtship. The first six read were not very ardent, although he usually began with "My Precious Girl." One started "My Dearest A. C." The witness, laughing behind her fan, said that "A. C." meant "Angel Child."

Jesse Pomeroy's Autobiography.

Because of the great interest aroused by the publication of Jesse Pomeroy's letters to his mother, the life of the prisoner, written by himself and one of the most remarkable autobiographies ever penned, will be printed in

FIVE YEARS FOR HOWARD GURNEY

Howard E. Gurney, who was dramatically arrested at the funeral of his wife, was found guilty of forgery to-day by Judge Johnson in the Woburn Court, and sentenced to five years in the Concord Reformatory. Gurney was charged with forging and uttering a check for $28, which he tendered Henry Mellitt of Stoneham in payment for goods.

Gurney's arrest at the grave of his wife, who was a daughter of Mayor Eugene H. Moore of Melrose, was startling to the residents of Melrose, where Gurney was a resident. As the last spadeful of earth was placed on the grave and the young husband turned to enter his carriage, two police officials clapped hands on his shoulders.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREAT CASH HOUSE.

Friday Three-Hour Sales

TWO FUNDAMENTALS. This store was founded on two fundamental ideas: First, cash buying and selling. Second, fair dealing; giving customers their money's worth. When the store was first opened by S. S. We have now some thirteen acres of floor space, and we need more room. It is a plain inference that the people liked, and continue to like, the CASH PRICE and FAIR DEALING.

MORE AID COMES IN TO MRS. SAUNDERS, WIFE OF FUGITIVE ROBBER

Alice N. Head, the bookkeeper of the Veazey Lumber Company of West Lebanon, who was held up by Robert A. Saunders and a companion, Saunders escaping and writing to the Sunday AMERICAN a remarkable confession of the crime, says that she is sorry for the young wife of the fugitive who robbed her.

"I have read Saunders's story," said Mrs. Head. "I have no sympathy for him, but I am sorry for his wife."

Many others feel sorry for the poor woman who left St. Elizabeth's Hospital after the birth of her child only to learn that her husband was being hunted for robbery.

Case Arouses Interest.

The interest in the case was stimulated by the pitiful letter of Saunders, who said that he had been driven to commit the crime because of his love for his wife. The wife and her child are with friends in South Boston. She is in need. Anyone wishing to help her may do so by sending their contribution to the AMERICAN, as Mrs. Saunders desires to keep her place of residence secret. Clothing for the baby would be welcome.

The following contributions have been received:

Ada E. Staveley	$5.00
V. O. Kalberg	1.00
E. Silverman	2.00
J. J. Connely, Webster	1.00
Mrs. Nathan Waxman	5.00
A Friend	.50
A Friend	Baby lace cap
South Boston Friend	1.00

Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead of Boston wrote her impressions of the case as follows:

Appeals to the Heart.

The painful and pathetic story of Mr. Saunders and his wife appeals to the heart of every one; yet his offence is so serious that I hardly see how he could be set free on probation, as men who commit minor first offences ought to be. It is a terrible thing to load a revolver and to threaten a person's life in order to secure money. That the amount secured was small and no one killed does not change the offence.

In deciding what public safety demands it must be remembered that Americans are peculiarly lawless. Out of every million citizens 129 commit murder, while in Canada out of every million only three on an average commit murder. In Europe the average is less than sixteen per million. Not more than one murderer in seventy-five is here executed. Lynchings and reckless and needless loss of life from accidents make us callous as to the value of human life.

There are other ways that Mr. Saunders might have taken to keep his wife from starving. He was ashamed to beg, but not to steal. Every heart must pity him profoundly.

Were his case alone to be considered, probation might be a happy solution, but the community must consider whether others of criminal possibilities might not be encouraged to yield under stress if they felt that the plea of affection would condone their crime.

I cannot help feeling in every case like this that were the good will of the community properly organized, it would be certain that any man under such stress as this would recognize and trust that good will and appeal to it securely for brotherly help and care.

Pathetic, Says Archdeacon.

Archdeacon Samuel G. Babcock, head of the charitable and missionary work in the Episcopal church in Massachusetts, said:

"The letter of Mr. Saunders is most pathetic, but in looking it over carefully, there is this premeditation in doing wrong. What is a man thinking of, when he attempts by this drastic method of carrying a revolver to get some one's money and then persuading himself that his wife will not find it out? I can understand how a man can do something under impulse and then ask forgiveness. But this man deliberately goes to work on a scheme, which adds shame to the poverty of his wife, and makes him out a criminal and then he writes this pathetic letter and tells that he did not wish to be a criminal, and that he was really driven to do what he has done."

NEW YORK 'OUTSIDE LINE' STARTS SUNDAY

The "outside route" to New York, discontinued when the steamships Harvard and Yale were transferred to the Pacific coast, becomes again an attractive trip next Saturday, when the new steamship Bunker Hill leaves New York for Boston. On the following day the steamship Massachusetts leaves New York for this port at 4 p. m., and at the same hour the Bunker Hill leaves here for New York. The line is to be known as the Boston Line of the Maine Steamship Company, and the vessels in the service are of the greyhound type and about a thousand tons bigger than the old Harvard and Yale. They are both commodious twin-screw boats, and will reach their docks at 8:30 a. m.

SOCIETY GIRLS TO RACE ASTRIDE

The girl riders in Boston's younger set say they will.

Their masculine friends say they won't.

To do what?

To ride astraddle in a polo pony race at the Country Club, Brookline, next Saturday morning.

That proposed race between feminine jockeys is the smart set topic to-day. The girls say they will hold the race and that it will beat any event so far on the Country Club card.

One thing is sure. If the race comes off as scheduled, it will be a strictly private affair. The public will not be admitted. Members of the Country Club of course, will be privileged to see the race, as it will be on their club grounds.

Feel Safer Astride.

Next Saturday is the final day of the 1911 June races at the Country Club. At Wednesday's races talk sprung up among the girl members of the club about a race on polo ponies or galloways for girl riders. Among the younger feminine members of the club are many expert riders. They know all about horses and riding and racing and such. They can talk horse chatter with the keenest of the men. They lay bets on the races—small ladylike bets, of course—and they talk up for their favorites like any plunger at the Suburban Handicap.

The idea of a race for girl riders was taken up eagerly by the feminine members. The more they talked about it the better they liked it. Some spoke to their parents about it right away, to get permission. It was found that the club stewards would have no objection if the riders were willing.

To-day the girls are going ahead with their plans. The idea is for a half-mile race around the Clyde Park track for girl riders on polo ponies or galloways. The race will be on the flat and, for the safety of the riders, it is recommended that they ride astride.

Won't Be Public, of Course.

Riding astride will be no novelty for Boston society girls. Any pleasant Summer morning girl riders may be seen out on the Fenway bridle path, clad in divided skirts and riding astride as jaunty and self-possessed as possible. They are clever and daring equestriennes, too. They "sit" a mount firmly and ride with all the correctness and ability that comes from expensive training at the Park and New Riding Schools.

But this girl's race, which is proposed for Saturday, will not be public, not by any means. The final events of the Country Club's 1911 meet come Saturday afternoon. This will be public, like the first two days of the meet last Saturday and yesterday. But, by the time the public gets there in the afternoon, the girls' pony race will be all over.

The girls' event promises to be a real contest. The sight of some of Boston's prettiest and most fashionable young women clattering around Clyde Park track astride nippy little polo ponies or galloways will be one to stir the blood.

And the girls say now that they will do it.

JUDGE SCHOFIELD ON U. S. CIRCUIT BENCH

Judge William Schofield of Malden, who was appointed by President Taft on May 24 from the Superior Court Bench to succeed the late Judge Francis C. Lowell on the United States Circuit Court Bench, was to-day sworn in by Judge Colt. In attendance were Judge Dodge of the United States District Court, United States District Attorney Asa P. French and his three assistants, William H. Garland, E. Mark Sullivan and J. Bernard Ferber. William Schofield was born in Dudley, Worcester County, February 14, 1857. He was elected to the General Court from Malden in 1899, and three years later was appointed by Governor Crane to the Superior Bench. In the Legislature he won fame as an orator, a resourceful debater and a rapid thinker.

'L' YIELDS IN 50-YEAR LEASE

the lease. It must be clear that such an extension would not solve, but merely postpone, present difficulties, storing them up for the embarrassment of future generations.

It is also clear that such a long term extension would greatly complicate future public control of the Metropolitan transit system by the presence of an inactive third party with rights and privileges to be considered. For example, no pressure could at any time be brought to bear upon the Elevated through the revocation of surface locations without injuring an innocent third party, the West End, to whom these locations would belong. Likewise the transportation system could not be acquired by the State or by the city without paying a price greatly enhanced by the termination of a long-term lease under which dividends are guaranteed.

It is far better to settle this question once and for all in the best way and along the lines which have so long been advocated, rather than to adopt at this late hour an inferior and ill-considered compromise.

Hopes for Substitution.

Third—They provide for no increase in the present return received by the West End stockholders. The 7 per cent. which the common stockholders now receive is, in the words of the Joint Board, "amply liberal." No disinterested person has yet pronounced it otherwise. At a time when the public is in grave need of additional transportation facilities and when heavy burdens are being imposed upon the Elevated, any increase in this dividend rate would be a gross imposition upon the people of Boston.

Fourth—They provide for the immediate construction of the Boylston street subway, which is but a substitute for a subway to which the Elevated is already committed by law, and guard against any unreasonable delay in the construction of the other new subways and tunnels.

The League earnestly hopes that the bills may be substituted as a first step in the solution of an important and difficult problem on a rational basis founded on sound public policy.

THE PUBLIC FRANCHISE LEAGUE.
By Joseph B. Eastman, secretary.

THE PROPER WAY TO SHAMPOO

In speaking of the careless way in which most women care for their hair, Mrs. Mae Martyn, the noted authority, writes as follows in the Los Angeles News. "The increasing baldness of women with accompanying scalp troubles is becoming alarming. Short, thin, dull, faded, brittle, falling, streaky hair is very common. Few seem to realize that these troubles are often caused by the alkali in the soap used for shampooing. It is too strong for the hair and eats the very life out it.

"The only safe, reliable shampoo I know of is, perhaps, the least expensive. It is made by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. No other shampoo lathers so well, cleanses so thoroughly or will remove dirt and dandruff as satisfactorily. It is the finest thing I have ever found for making the hair soft, fluffy and lustrous. If women would use this splendid shampoo exclusively we would hear less of hair and scalp troubles."

HARVARD CLASS DAY EXERCISES DRAW GREAT THRONG TO CAMBRIDGE

With the joy of our life with the fire of our souls,
May we keep man's inheritance free,
By the might of the Puritan's mystic emprise
Consecrated, O Mother, to thee.

Oration by Collier.

The class orator was Charles Sager Collier of Kinderhook, N. Y. His plea to his fellow-classmates was to be useful men.

"Now why is scholarship thus sterile?" he asked. "Why are educated men so unproductive? Why is their culture so devoid of practical benefit? Inertia and selfishness are to be held accountable. It is said that most men mean well, but a passive altruism is certainly a useless altruism. Inertia is really a form of selfishness, and it is only less culpable than actual greed. Now a genuine patriotism would make impossible such unsocial attitudes.

"The root of all evil in political life is public indifference. What all our governmental reforms, the direct primary for example, are really aimed to obviate is just this indifference. And for this regrettable situation the educated men are more responsible than their less favored fellow citizens. The educated men are the natural leaders of opinion and they should set the example in attention to the details of politics, for there patriotism may be shown, as well as on the battle field.

Sad Day for the State.

"Whatever is political is important. Political institutions and laws affect far larger numbers of men than ever can come within the reach of any orator's voice or any author's circle of readers. It is a sad day for the State when politics become too degraded or too dull for educated men to take an active part.

"And may we face the world with the unswerving purpose of Puritan righteousness, forgetting the Puritan's petty dogmatism, and remembering his splendid quest of earnestness, which is so sadly needed by the world to-day. There are great aspirations, but if youth have no vision, can manhood have achievements? May our actual lives be worthy of the ideals of youth."

There was much interest in the class poem. In recent years class poems have included some of the best American verse produced for many years. The poet of the class of '11 was Harold Trowbridge Pulsifer of New York City, and his poem was entitled, "Carmel Fire." It was as follows:

The Class Day Poem.

I

Unkindled beacons on the height
Dark looming to the watchful sky,
You wait the sudden spurt of light
To prove the God your lives deny.

With hidden dread you dare not name,
You chant of deeds you do not dare,
Half fearful lest the living flame
Shall leap in answer to your prayer.

From ancient altars wrought of clay
New moulded in fanatic guise,
You lift the ghost of yesterday
To make to-morrow's paradise.

From naked living growing stone
With idle heart and fevered hand,
An earthen temple all marked
You build upon the shifting sand.

The shifting sands of doom and doubt,
Cold as the tenets of your creed,
The passion of a pagan soul
Were surer fashioned for your need.

Lo here, lo there, you turn and turn
The sport of ever shifting tides,
Blind to the life for which you yearn,
Dead planets lost in sunless skies.

II

How shall the phantom of your faith,
Wind-riven from forgotten lives,
Find life to save its empty wraith
To-morrow, when but life survives?

How shall your dimmer visioned eyes
That blind the shadow of the moon
Endure the radiance that lies
Within the blazing realm of noon?

Beyond the bounds of trodden ways
How shall the torch of your desire
Dull paralleled in murky haze
Flame suddenly to crystal fire?

Or if from night to jocund dawn
You sweep with sudden majesty,
How may the sudden veil be drawn
That pales your earthly pageantry?

With mirthless eyes and useless tears,
A prisoned host in viewless bars,
Are you to weight through weary years
Bowed by the laughter of the stars?

Is this your dream, is this your goal,
A miracle of sudden day
Law given to a printed soul
Because the lips have learned to pray?

And this your hope, the boon you crave,
A senseless tumult heaven crowned,
Your faith triumphant at the grave,
Too sacrament for earthly ground?

III

The riddle of to-morrow waits.
No mumbled prayer nor fevered hand
Can burst the angel guarded gates
That loom before the silent land.

Yet for to-day no star-born sign
No molten image raised on high
Need you to prove that power divine
Within whose hollowed hand you lie.

The Voice of twice a thousand years
Cries out against your wingless prayer.
With broken reeds your empty fears
Have thronged to storm the joyful air!

Make love your creed and life your aim!
Have done with doubt and fears of doom!
Behold this living torch of flame
Sky towering through the ancient gloom!

No heart so poor, no life so dark,
No eye so blind, no soul so dead,
But God has some time sent that spark
The instant love that conquers dread.

What need of written creed you you
Whose lives have known that primal fire
Dare to be loved! Dare to be true!
Live in the light of your desire!

Oh, free born souls, take up the call
In chorus of empassioned praise
Sing "Love triumphant over all
Forever, through endless days."

From start to star, from sun to sun,
Shall your glad triumph song be hurled—
The love you long to give to one
Made great enough to hold the world!

Then to the "Spreads."

The Sanders Theatre exercises ended at noon and from then until 2 o'clock the seniors were busy preparing for the afternoon exercises at the Stadium which were preceded by "spreads" or luncheons at the Hasty Pudding, Triangle, Pi Eta and other clubs and at Beck Hall and other dormitories where the wealthier students live. At these "spreads" there were entertained parents and friends of the Seniors, and the patronesses and guests included members of the innermost society sets of Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

The yard was closed at 2 o'clock, and admission during the rest of the afternoon and evening was by ticket only. In the afternoon a band played and then at 4 o'clock began the procession to the Stadium on Soldiers Field. First came a band and Harvard and class flags, then came the freshmen, then the juniors, sophomores and seniors and last of all came the graduates of other years marching by classes.

In gay procession they marched across the rickety bridge over the Charles river and into the Stadium, where they seated themselves on the ground in the field itself. In the bowl of the Stadium above was the great crowd of visitors, nearly 5,000 in all. The girls in bright Summer gowns presented a beautiful picture.

To-night there will be the illumination of the yard, and dancing at Memorial Hall and in the gymnasium. At 9 o'clock the Glee Club will sing and with the singing of "Fair Harvard" the Class Day of 1911 will come to an end.

ESTHER THOMPSON, WHO TRIED TO END HER LIFE IN COURT

ESTHER THOMPSON PHOTO BY KATZ

THOMPSON GIRL QUITS HOSPITAL

To-day Esther Thompson left the Relief Hospital and took up again the life burdens which she decided only yesterday were too heavy to be endured. Esther is the seventeen-year-old girl of No. 10 Cliff street, Roxbury, who took corrosive sublimate in an ante-room of the Superior Criminal court rather than receive the sentence she expected of two years in Lancaster. Mrs. Thompson, Esther's faithful and devoted mother, was down early to comfort the girl, and to reassert her unwavering confidence in her daughter's innocence.

"Esther is an innocent girl, and these charges against her are wickedly false," said Mrs. Thompson. "She is the victim of circumstances, and we can prove that the charges they make against her are not true. She is not responsible for other girls' actions."

As Esther lay back on the pillows very pale under her clear olive skin, her beautiful hazel eyes flashing as she talked to her visitors, it was hard to realize that a spirit so full of vitality and enthusiasm had been willing to give up life a few hours before.

Death Before Prison.

"Did you realize, Esther, that taking that poison meant death—just the end of everything?" she was asked.

"Yes," the girl's soft eyes turned h rd, and she almost snapped the monosyllable, "but that was nothing. I'd do it again."

"Why, what were you afraid of?"

"Well, you see, I'm engaged, and when I realized that this all had to come out, and that he would have to hear all these things against me that are not true, I just made up my mind I'd rather die than go through it, and I would. And I would do it again rather than go to Lancaster."

Mrs. Thompson looked up from the girl's bedside with a sad smile. "She's a plucky child," she commented.

"Esther has always been a good daughter to me," went on the mother, "and I always know where she is, and can prove that she has not been around the way these charges make out. She has been going out evenings a good deal lately, but she has been keeping steady company with a young man all the Spring, and there is no objection to that.

"I always knew where she was, for either he would come after her to get her, or if they had an appointment to meet somewhere she would show me his letters, or if he telephoned she would tell me what their plans were. I do not care to give his name without consulting him first, but he is an assistant surgeon in a hospital near here, and a thoroughly reputable young man.

Mother Defends Girl.

"We can prove by him and by others just where Esther has been all her time, and that she is innocent of the charges against her. Esther is a good girl, and I have never had any trouble in managing her. It was her father that she didn't get along with. He never could understand her.

WORCESTER, June 22.—Commencement Day was observed at Holy Cross College to-day, when sixty-four men, comprising the second largest class in the history of the institution, were graduated and received their diplomas from Governor Foss.

The program opened at 9 o'clock, when the alumni attended a memorial mass for alumni in the chapel. An hour afterwards there was a reception to the faculty, graduates and guests in Fenwick Hall, where they formed in line for the procession to the west side of the building, where the graduating exercises were held.

James A. Crotty of Worcester was the salutatorian. The valedictory was by John F. Reilly of Mittenague. Other student speakers included Edmund J. Curran of Worcester and Harry A. JOHN CRAIG AIDING WORTHY CHARITIES

John Craig is turning his Castle Square Theatre to good uses this Summer. He is devoting a liberal percentage of his gross receipts to charitable purposes, and is making it possible for several institutions to enlarge their field of operation. At the Tuesday afternoon performance of "The Lottery Man" the Shore Haven cottage was the beneficiary, and next Tuesday the Floating Hospital will receive a share of the receipts from the performance of "The Genius." A week beyond that the Berkeley Infirmary will be the favored recipient of Mr. Craig's generosity. This plan of helping worthy charities is one in which Mr. Craig is taking an active personal interest, and he hopes by carrying it out regularly through his Summer and regular seasons to do not a little good to the charitable enterprises of Boston.

CHARGE MELLEN AIMS TO SHIFT BLAME FOR BLOW AT GRAND TRUNK

A new turn was given to-day to the railroad situation at Portland, Me., when the assertion was made that the Boston & Maine is now attempting to shift the responsibility for the elimination of the Grand Trunk's through car service to Maine Summer resorts onto the shoulders of the Portland Terminal Company. It was declared that the Boston & Maine, and hence President Charles S. Mellen, controls the Portland Terminal Company, and that therefore the Grand Trunk has reason to lay the blame at the doors of the New Haven railroad.

Officials of the Grand Trunk to-day sa' the Boston & Maine, by cutting out th sleeper service at Portland, is discriminat ing against the Grand Trunk in favor o the Canadian Pacific, the former's greatest rival for carrying tourists into Maine way of Canadian points.

Passenger Traffic Manager Charles M. Burt of the Boston & Maine denies that his road has refused to haul Grand Trunk cars on its tracks. He blamed the Portland Terminal Corporation for the refusal.

The terminal company was recently organized for the purpose of controlling a "limited amount of trackage about the Portland Union station, including the Boston & Maine and the Maine Central tracks in the vicinity." It is the claim of the Boston & Maine that the refusal to the Grand Trunk will greatly benefit the former railroad.

Blow Aimed at Rival.

Shutting out the Grand Trunk at Portland is generally regarded as another move by President Mellen to thwart the Grand Trunk railway. News dispatches from Providence and Montreal indicate that the sentiment in the two cities is unanimous in the belief that the New Haven means to fight the Grand Trunk tooth and nail in an effort to handicap the company in its New England connections.

"Cy" Warman, assistant general superintendent of the Grand Trunk, declares the order of the Boston & Maine affecting the Grand Trunk's trackage relations at Portland is another step to hinder his railroad in its activities in New England.

"The motive behind the Boston & Maine's latest move against the Grand Trunk is very apparent," said Mr. Warman. "The Boston & Maine is simply trying to shut off the Grand Trunk from New England. That's my opinion of the matter. The Boston & Maine traffic management, it appears to me, is making a strong effort to handicap our railway system and to shackle its activities in this section."

That President Mellen is putting up a good game at railroad chess, using his pawns and other pieces to the best advantage of his lines, is the belief of the Grand Trunk representatives. They recalled to-day the obstacles Mr. Mellen is charged with putting in the path of the Grand Trunk in Vermont, in Massachusetts, and in Rhode Island. The Grand Trunk branch to Providence is now assured despite Mr. Mellen's opposition. They say they take the Boston & Maine's attitude with reference to the through cars at Portland to Old Orchard, Kennebunk and other Maine shore resorts as proving the New Haven intends to contest every inch of territory to the Grand Trunk in New England.

Montreal's Views.

A dispatch from Montreal, where are located the general offices of the Grand Trunk system, says:

"This move at Portland is the culmination of a deliberate effort of Charles S. Mellen to further injure the connections of the Grand Trunk in New England and is in line with the well known mental attitude of the President of the New Haven road, who has come to believe that any other system seeking to enter New England is a thief and an interloper.

"Simultaneously with this notification to the Grand Trunk officials here, the Canadian Pacific Railroad, the Grand Trunk's rival for New England Summer resort and tourist traffic, is beginning to advertise that it is the only through route from Montreal to Old Orchard. This of course indicates that the Boston & Maine will continue to handle the Canadian Pacific cars, but not those of the Grand Trunk.

"The Grand Trunk has pent hundreds of dollars in recent years advertising its connections with New England resorts. It has also widely advertised all conventions held in Boston and other large New England cities, giving special reductions in fares. In this way the Grand Trunk has built up a very large and continually increasing business. Hereafter travelers will have to leave sleepers at Portland Junction, taking what the Boston & Maine calls a 'cab train' at the Portland Union Station, and then changing to Boston & Maine cars.

Grand Trunk to Fight.

"It is understood her that the Grand Trunk will take up the gauntlet that has been thrown to it and will make a continuous fight for the preservation of the resort business it has built up for itself in New England."

An effort has been made by Grand Trunk officials in Boston to adjust the differences with the Boston & Maine traffic management, it was learned to-day. It was explained that the difficulties encountered at Portland will not affect the traffic agreements existing between the Boston & Maine and the Grand Trunk at other poin The Portland through car service had bee in effect for thirty-nine years until the Boston & Maine made known its discontinuance yesterday.

Passenger Traffic Manager W. E. Davis of the Grand Trunk, who has been in Boston, gave it as his opinion that the result of the action at Portland will be to injure New England. He said the Grand Trunk will be able to hold its own.

Referring to the efforts made by the Boston AMERICAN to have the Grand Trunk come to Boston, Mr. Davis said:

"The work of the AMERICAN and the repeatedly expressed sentiments of Boston business men and organizations and of the people generally indicate that Boston needs the Grand Trunk more and more as time passes."

First Vice-President E. H. Fitzhugh of the Grand Trunk is in Boston to-day, having come from Providence, where he attended the meeting to organize the Southern New England Railway, which is the name under which the Grand Trunk will construct its line from Palmer through Southbridge to Providence. Mr. Fitzhugh was elected president of the new company. It was announced that the plans for the Southern New England railway's line in Rhode Island will be filed at the State House in Providence by July 1. The Massachusetts Railroad Commission is to give a hearing on the matter of the road's plans for Blackstone and vicinity in Massachusetts.

SUN BURSTS FORTH FROM CLOUDS AS GEORGE TAKES ROYAL OATH

NATURE'S BENEDICTION RESULTS IN A STRIKING PICTURE WITHIN GLOOMY WALLS.

gold. The color gradually changes in shade until it becomes the palest silver. The trimming is diamante embroidered on blue tulle. She wore a diamond and emerald necklace, tiara and stomacher and carried a white ostrich fan similar in all respects to the one sent as a bridal gift to Queen Mary from South Africa.

Aside from the King and Queen, and possibly Lord Kitchener, Mr. Hammond was one of the most interesting members of the procession. He was cheered as the state carriage in which he rode passed down the human lane flanked with British soldiers. In the carriage with Mr. Hammond were Admiral Jonquieres of the French navy; Duke Albrecht of Wurtemburg and Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria. Their carriage was the seventh in line.

The Americans among the spectators were especially vociferous in their greeting to the American envoy, some of them waving small silk American flags.

The royal procession was divided into two divisions. In the first were the foreign royalty, special envoys, ambassadors of foreign lands and military escorts. It was composed of fifteen carriages. Life Guards escorted the procession and a military band played incessantly. This procession arrived at the Abbey at 9:55.

There were five carriages in the second division. In the first four were the cousins of the King and Queen. In the fifth were the children of the King and Queen. This division left the Palace at 10 o'clock and was escorted by the Horse Guards. When it arrived at the Abbey the royal children were loudly cheered.

The royal coach with its escort followed the second division. Among the officers in the escorting cavalcade were the Duke of Teck and the Duke of Connaught. Detachments of foreign troops marched before.

Vast Crowd is Impatient.

The vast concourse of spectators awaiting the coming of the royal party, many of whom had been braving fog and light rain for many hours, had begun to get impatient before the thunder of forty-one guns from the Tower of London and twenty-one from a battery in Hyde Park announced that King George was leaving Buckingham Palace. Instantly every one was electrified into eager anticipation and applause rolled up and down the streets, flanked on each side with banked up humanity, like the thunder of surf.

Cheer after cheer rent the air as the royal cavalcade went by. The King and Queen were flushed with pleasure. Lord Roberts looked pleased, but the stern and soldierly Kitchener with a face as immobile as granite looked straight ahead unmindful of the plaudits.

It required just twenty minutes for the royal party to pass from the Palace to the Cathedral, and the ovation lasted the entire time.

The scenes which the spectators walled up in central London saw to-day will ever remain a vivid memory. The impressiveness of it and the quickening military aspect, coupled with the solemn pageantry of mediæval days, presented an extraordinary picture.

Aside from the beauty of the effects, the excitement of the moment, the magnitude of the crowds and the solemnite of the ceremonies, the soldiers in line were a thrilling spectacle. The troops were from all dominions of the empire both at home and over seas. Some were dressed in scarlet coats and bearskin hats, others in khaki and weather-beaten sombreros. The Indian Sepoys with their chalk white helmets marched alongside the sun-browned South Africans.

A fanfare of trumpets announced the arrival of the King and Queen at the east door of the Abbey. They were met by the great officers of the State and conducted beneath the great arch into the nave. As the royal couple entered the choir broke in to song.

Red Cap of State.

The King wore the red cap of state, and his escort was entirely of men. The Queen's procession was fairylike in its beauty, her train being borne by six of the fairest young women in the land.

The Duke of Norfolk, earl marshal of the occasion, dressed in a scarlet and gold uniform, had all the guests seated before the King and Queen arrived. It had been a busy morning for him. Since 6:30 o'clock he had been directing a corps of uniformed ushers carrying gold and silver tipped staves who sent the guests to their places.

Between 8 and 9 o'clock a continuous procession of peers and peeresses streamed into the Abbey, resplendent in ermine and gold and carrying their coronets in their hands. Mingling with them were oriental princes in brilliant turbans from which jewels shone and magnificent uniforms.

The scene was impressive and inspiring. princes in brilliant turbans, from which jewels shone and magnificent uniforms.

Among the thousands of guests who had arrived at the Abbey before 8 o'clock few attracted more attention than the Princess Begum of Bhopa, a principality in British India. She was heavily veiled and attired in rich blue silk almost hidden by precious jewels.

J. P. Morgan and C. P. Taft.

Charles P. Taft, brother of President Taft, and J. P. Morgan were early arrivals, occupying conspicuous positions in the second row of the diplomatic gallery. Both were dressed in black, contrasting soberly with the brilliant uniforms of those about them.

Mr. Morgan experienced difficulty in obtaining a seat and it was only after great exertion that he was able to make his way to the diplomatic gallery.

Mr. Taft was accompanied by Mrs. Taft and their daughter and they had particularly good fortune in obtaining a seat giving them a splendid view.

United States Ambassador Whitelaw Reid and Mrs. Reid arrived early.

Mr. Reid looked ill, apparently having not recovered from his recent indisposition. Mr. Reid did not take a seat in the diplomatic gallery, his seat being filled by Mr. Hammond, the special envoy, who had taken his seat before the royal party arrived.

The spectators in the Abbey were distinguished by the beautiful dresses of the women, the brilliant uniforms of the men and the fabulous display of jewels. Lady Dufferin was the only notable American absentee.

The procession of the royal Princes and Princesses through the central aisles was a brilliant spectacle. The young Prince of Wales headed the procession wearing the insignia of the Garter. His mantle and robe were borne by Lord Ashley and his coronet by Lord Revelstoke. The two younger Princess, in highland costume followed. Princess Mary in white satin came next, followed by other royalties attended by their suites.

As the royal couple moved up the aisle the Queen's stately grace was never seen to better advantage. Her magnificent robes scintillated with jewels. She looked too gracefully statuesque to be quite human. The King's train seemed tawdry compared with the glimmering glory of his royal consort.

The King and Queen took up their places behind the altar upon the chairs of their estate and the services of the coronation proper were fully under way.

The entire 7,000 in the abbey arose as the choristers sang an anthem welcoming the royal pair.

The Archbishop of Canterbury began the communion service, which was followed by the sermon by the Archbishop of York. The sermon was brief and pertinent to the occasion. The ceremony of the recognition started at 11:57 o'clock. The King stood by his chair, turning about so the people in all parts of the abbey could see him. At the same time the Archbishop of Canterbury cried:

"Sirs, I here present unto you King George, the undoubted King of this realm, wherefore all you who are come to-day to do your homage and service, are you willing to do the same?"

Salute of Twenty-one Guns.

Immediately there came cries of "God save the King," and "Long live the King," followed by a fanfare of trumpets. At the same time the boom of twenty-one guns fired in salute from a battery in St. James Park could be heard.

In answering the archbishop in the ceremony of taking the oath, George spoke in a low voice, placing his hand upon the Bible at the altar when he swore to do his duty as sovereign by the English people. After the King had signed the oath and kissed the Bible he declared: "All those things which I have heretofore promised I will perform. So help me God."

The King sat in the chair of Edward the Confessor beneath a golden canopy held by four Knights of the Garter while the Archbishop of Canterbury annointed him upon the head, breast and the palms of both hands.

The dean of Westminster brought the crown from the altar when the time arrived for the symbol to be placed upon the King's head. The Archbishop of Canterbury received the crown, stood silent a moment, then slowly lowered it until the diadem rested firmly upon George's head. At the same moment the peers donned their coronets and a jubilant cry, "Long live the King," echoed to the vaulted roof of the cathedral. Immediately a salute of forty-one guns was sounded from the batteries drawn up in Hyde Park, echoing simultaneously with a cannonade of sixty-two shots from the tower. It was then 12:37 o'clock.

Throng Hears the News.

Word that the King had been crowned flashed with electric quickness to the crowd outside. Bells were rung and millions of voices joined everywhere in tremendous shouts of "God save the King."

A fanfare of trumpets announced the culminating act in the ceremonies. After the King had taken his seat upon the throne, princes and peers of the realm, headed by the young Prince of Wales, gravely paid homage to the monarch according to seniority of rank.

With lesser ceremony the Queen was crowned, the royal diadem being placed upon her head at 12:52 o'clock. After the Queen had been crowned she proceeded to her throne, bowing low as she passed the King. The essential parts of the service had been completed.

By 7 o'clock the streets converging with the royal route were alive with pedestrians as well as autos and carriages, crammed with seat holders on their way to take up their positions. Gorgeous state coaches carrying Ambassadors and Peeresses made their way in great numbers toward the Abbey, mingling with long lines of cavalry, artillery and infantry marching to Longstreet's. The troops took up their positions at 7:15.

A great crush broke the police cordon at Charing Cross, but the uniformed line was re-established after a prolonged battle with the crowd.

The King arose soon after seven. He drank coffee and breakfasted with the Queen shortly before 9.

London was a riot of color, the Union Jack being everywhere. Flags of all nations floated from many a staff and were draped from windows. The royal color was everywhere; in and out of dwellings—in hotels, restaurants, depots—nowhere could the eye direct its gaze without meeting the same sight.

The procession to the Abbey for the coronation ceremonies was protected by thousands of soldiers and police. It was the most picturesque scene the ancient capital had ever witnessed. There were many old-fashioned stage coaches of the nobility, many of them ancient, but repainted and regilded since the coronation of King Edward VII. They were drawn by four horses apiece and made a brave showing. Outriders flanked the horses and gorgeously livered footmen stood on the rail behind.

In curious contrast with the antique coaches were the great number of automobiles in the procession through the attention and from millions of British throats a tumult of cheering broke out which rolled like huge billows above the densely packed mall.

King George's approach to the Abbey was heralded by the King's Bargemaster and twelve watermen wearing medieval tunics, knee breeches and stockings, all scarlet, with the crown and badges emblazoned in gold on their breasts. Their feet were encased in low shoes adorned by huge silver buckles. They wore velvet caps with long feathers. Immediately following the watermen came closed carriages bearing the royal party.

Each carriage was drawn by splendid horses gorgeously caparisoned. Following the coaches came the household troops and especially picked military, made up of detachments of soldiers of England and the colonies. Many of the companies of soldiers were picked for distinguished services in the field. Field Marshal Lord Kitchener, alert of eye and grim of jaw, rode at the head of the troops, looking neither to the right nor left and unmindful of the roaring cheers that were directed at him.

Also in the military procession was Lord Roberts, or "Bobs" as the people of England love to call him, while Indian princes and maharajahs and potentates of the empire, wearing brilliant robes agleam with diamonds, presented a glittering picture.

Their splendid robes and jewels glinted as the party passed through the streets. Their curious turbans made a striking contrast with the headdresses of the Occident.

In the great lumbering coach of state rode the King and Queen, the cynosure of millions of eyes; hundreds of thousands of strangers had journeyed to London—some nearly the entire distance around the world—to get a glimpse of the sturdy, bearded potentate and his comely wife seated beside him.

King Uses New Oath.

As the procession reched the Abbey the party of the Prince of Wales proceeded the royal party, the Prince entering the Abbey as a brilliant preliminary to the coming of King George and Queen Mary.

Police kept Parliament square and the streets leading to the Abbey clear of people and government agents and ferreted men from Scotland Yard mingled with the multitude, keeping an alert eye open for suspicious looking persons. Not until the ceremonies had been ended was their vigilance relaxed.

King George was the first monarch in the English line to use the new coronation oath with religious allusions eliminated. The Catholics had led the efforts for a change in the old oath and it was rewritten into new form. The oath which the King repeated to-day was as follows:

I do solemnly and sincerely, in the presence of God, profess, testify and declare that I am a faithful member of the Protestant Reformed Church as by law established in England, and I will according to the true intent of the enactments which are intended to secure the Protestant succession to the throne of my realm uphold and maintain the said enactments to the best of my power according to the law.

The old oath was as follows:

I do solemnly and sincerely, in the presence of God, profess, testify and declare that I do believe that in the sacrament of the Lord's Supper there is not any transsubstantiation of the elements of bread and wine into the body and blood of Christ at or after the consecration thereof by any person whatsoever; and that the invocation or adoration of the Virgin Mary or any other saint and the sacrifice of the mass as they are now used in the church of Rome are superstitions and idolatrous, and I do solemnly, in the presence of God, profess, testify and declare that I do make this declaration and every part thereof in the plain and ordinary sense of the words read unto me as they are commonly understood by English Protestants without any evasion, equivocation or mental reservation whatsoever and without any dispensation already granted me for this purpose by the Pope or any other authority or persons whatsoever or without thinking that I am or can be acquitted before God or man or absolved of this declaration or any part thereof although the Pope or any other person or persons of power whatsoever should dis-

Removes Hairs and Whitens Skin

(Fashion Monthly.)

It is not longer necessary for those afflicted with superfluous hairs to use the painful electric needle, for a simple powder known to druggists as delatone, the discovery of a Russian chemist, it is said, quickly and permanently removes hairy or downy growths from any part of the body without the least injury to the skin.

A little delatone is mixed with water and spread on the hairy surface, then after two or three minutes it is rubbed off, the skin washed and the hairs are gone. Aside from removing hairs, delatone leaves the skin soft and white. While genuine delatone is a little expensive, an ounce is ample and well worth its cost.

DENTIST CHAIR DEATH INQUIRY

WESTBORO, June 22.—In an effort to ascertain what caused the death of William Fournier, thirteen years old, who died in the dentist chair of the Lyman School for Boys, an autopsy was performed to-day by Medical Examiner Knight. It was said that the boy was examined before an anesthetic was administered. After the boy's death it was said that death was the result of heart disease.

PRISONER SOBS PLEA TO JURY

At the close of the trial to-day of Guissepe Di Maio, charged with first degree murder in killing Antonio Di Filippo in a razor fight in Newton on November 27 last, in the Superior Criminal Court in East Cambridge, the defendant clasped his hands in supplication and, in tears, addressed the jury.

"I pray God," he sobbed, "that He will help you to do me justice."

"If I did anything to Di Fillippo, I did not mean to kill him. I was going about my business and he followed me. The witnesses were all against me, because I come from one town in Italy and they from another."

TWO LEAP TO ESCAPE FIRE

Before firemen could raise ladders to take them down, a boy and girl leaped from the attic window of the home of Patrick McKeown, No. 73 Clinton street, Newton, early to-day. Both escaped serious injury. Mr. McKeown was badly burned while trying to put out the fire. Three daughters escaped from the house thinly clad. The fire did $100 damage to the house.

POPE GRATIFIED WITH AMERICANS' EFFORT FOR PEACE

ROME, June 22.—In a letter addressed to Monsignor Farconio, Pope Pius X. wishes success to the cause of universal peace and pays a tribute to several Americans and especially to Andrew Carnegie, for their efforts to that end, the Pontiff writes that he is "gratified with the noble initiative of some illustrious Americans in favor of peace."

MRS. LAPLANTE NOW MISSING

The amazing case of Mrs. Elise LaPlante of No. 47 Shepard street, Lynn, who started the police on a search for a son who, she alleged, had been murdered, was further complicated today, when it was discovered that she had disappeared. Since nine o'clock last night, when she was last seen at her home, the police have been unable to trace her. They believe she has been spirited away and they are doing their utmost to solve the tangle. That there is some unrevealed influence behind the LaPlante case, they are convinced.

LEAKING CRAFT STRUGGLES IN

The two-masted British schooner M. B. S. wallowed into the harbor today from St. Johns, N. B., leaking two feet an hour. The leak has been taking water for three days and Captain Gale and his crew of four were worn out with pump work. The Betsy Ross towed the schooner over to South Boston flats, where low tide will give a chance to mend the leak.

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES IN HISTORIC WESTMINSTER ABBEY

pense with or annul the same or declare that it was null and void from the beginning.

Twenty Distinct Functions.

The ceremonies of the coronation were sub-divided into twenty distinct functions, all of them imposing, but of a mediaeval character. Enumerated they follow: 1, the preparation; 2, the entrance into the church; 3, the recognition; 4, the litany; 5, the beginning of the communion service; 6, the sermon; 7, the oath; 8, the anointing; 9, the presentation of the spurs and sword and the girding and oblation of the sword; 10, the investing with the armill and Royal Robe and the delivery of the orb; 11, the investiture per annulum et baculum; 12, the putting on of the crown; 13, the presenting of the Holy Bible; 14, the Benediction; 15, the inthronization; 16, the homage; 17, the Queen's coronation; 18, the communion; 19, the Te Deum; 20, the recess.

The preparation consisted of the filling of the ampull with oil, and together with a spoon they were laid upon the altar. The Archbishop and Bishops' assistants, vested in their copes, were already garbed for the ceremony and awaited immediately outside the west door of the church until notice was given that the King and Queen had arrived. Then they moved into the church.

As the royal couple entered the church the choir of Westminster broke forth into an anthem which they continued to sing while the King and Queen moved slowly through the choir, up the stairs and into the theatre, bending in low genuflection as they passed the thrones. They knelt at the stools set for them before the chairs on the south side of the altar, murmured a prayer, then arose and seated themselves in the chairs.

In the meantime the Archbishop turned to the east side of the theatre. Marching with solemn dignity after him came the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Great Chamberlain, the Lord High Constable and Earl Marshal, preceded by the Garter King of Arms. The Archbishop then walked slowly to each of the four sides of the theatre, calling the people to attention. Then, as the King arose and slowly turned, the Archbishop called out again:

King Is Presented.

"Sirs, I here present unto you King George, the undoubted King of his Realm, wherefore all you who have come this day to do your homage and service—are you willing to do the same?"

In answer came a mighty burst from beneath: "God save the King!" There was a blast from the trumpets and the ceremony of recognition was over.

Then advanced the bearers of the Bible, paten and chalice, and these were laid upon the altar. Following them came two bishops, vested in copes, who knelt at faldstools and sang the litany. After the communion service by the Archbishop the creed was sung, the King, Queen and all others arising while this was being done.

The sermon that followed was short and then the Archbishop, standing before the King, asked:

"Sir, is Your Majesty willing to take the oath?"

The King replied: "I am willing."

With the sword of state carried before him, the King walked to the altar, assisted by the Lord Great Chamberlain. Placing his hand upon the Bible and dropping to his knees, the King repeated the brief formula:

"The things which I have heretofore promised I will perform and keep. So help me God." Then he kissed the Bible and signed the oath.

Again the King and Queen knelt at their stools; again the choir burst forth in song. The King, having divested himself of his crimson robe, the cape of state was placed upon his head by the Great Lord Chamberlain, and again he walked before the altar. With four Knights of the Garter holding a pall of silk and cloth of gold over his head, the King seated himself in King Edward's chair. The Dean of Westminster lifted the ampulla and spoon from the altar, a little of the oil was poured into the spoon and the Archbishop anointed the King in the form of the cross four times, once upon the head, once upon the breast and once upon the palm of each hand, murmuring a benediction with each.

Kneels Before Altar.

The King knelt before the chair, the Archbishop repeated a prayer over his head and then the kneeling monarch arose and was girdled with a baldric of cloth of gold.

The spurs and sword were handed the King and the Lord Great Chamberlain knelt and touched the ruler's heels with the golden spurs.

The master of the robes having delivered the royal robe and the armill to the Dean of Westminster, the King was once more invested, the Lord Great Chamberlain fastening the clasps upon the garment. The cross and orb were then brought, these being symbols of the power of Almighty God.

The keeper of the royal jewel house delivered to the Archbishop the King's ring, in which a table jewel is encased, and the Archbishop placed it upon His Majesty's hand.

Two sceptres, one with the cross and the other bearing the symbol of a dove, were brought forward and presented by the Archbishop. Handing first the sceptre with the cross, the Archbishop said:

"Receive the royal sceptre, the ensign of kingly power and justice."

As King George received the sceptre with the dove in his left hand, the Archbishop uttered a plea that the King ever be merciful to his subjects and punish no man unjustly.

Probably the most solemn part of the ceremony was the putting on of the royal crown. The crown was first blessed by the Archbishop and then the King again seated himself in the chair of King Edward. The Dean of Westminster handed the crown to the Archbishop, who, accompanied by the bishops, moved forward and placed the crown upon the royal brow.

At the sight of this the people shouted "God save the King" and "Long live the King." The trumpets sounded and the great guns in the tower fired the royal salute.

As the acclamation ceased the Archbishop presented the Bible, saying:

"Our gracious King, we present you with this book, the most valuable thing that the world affords. Here is wisdom; this is the royal law; these are the living oracles of God."

Now had come the time for King to ascend to the throne. Assisted by the Archbishop, the bishops and peers of the realm who had been delegated to the service, he took his seat upon the seat of state, while the Archbishop who stood before him said:

"Stand firm and hold fast henceforth the seat and state of royal and imperial dignity, which is this day delivered unto you, in the name and by the authority of Almighty God, and by the hands of us, the bishops and servants of God, though unworthy and as you see us to approach nearer to God's altar, so vouchsafe the more graciously to continue to us your royal favor and protection.

Pay Homage to King.

The exhortation being ended, all the princes and peers advanced to do homage to their newly crowned King. The archbishop knelt before the King with the others kneeling behind. After a brief space the Archbishop arose and kissed the King upon the left cheek. The Prince of Wales, followed by the other princes, then knelt and murmured their vows of fealty and homage. The princes of the blood royal and peers arose, passing slowly before the King each kissing him upon the left cheek. When the homage was ended drums were beaten, trumpets sounded and the people shouted "Long live the King."

The solemnity of the King's coronation being ended, the ceremonies of crowning Queen Mary immediately followed. Supported by two bishops the Queen walked to the altar, where a prayer was said. The Queen walked to a small faldstool placed near the chair of King Edward where she knelt while four young peeresses held a pall of silk over her and the Archbishop anointed her head with oils that had been blessed.

After receiving the Queen's ring, the Archbishop of York lifted the crown from the altar and placed it upon Queen Mary's head, saying as he did so:

"Receive the crown of glory, honor and joy. And God, the crown of the faithful, who by our episcopal hands (though unworthy) doth this day set a crown of pure gold upon your head."

Sceptre in Queen's Hand.

The Queen, being crowned, the peeresses all put their coronets upon their heads and the archbishop placed the sceptre in the Queen's right hand the ivory rod with the dove into her left, saying a prayer meanwhile. Conducted by the archbishop the Queen then made her way to her own throne, bowing low as she passed the King.

Then followed further religious rites with the choir singing in the offertory. King George and Queen Mary knelt at the altar for communion, the archbishop handing them the bread and the Dean of Westminster the cup.

After communion the King and Queen once again adorned themselves in their royal robes, and taking their sceptres in their hands, seated themselves upon their respective thrones. After the choir had sung another Te Deum their Majesties descended. Preceded by bearers of four swords the king passed into the chapel of St. Edward from the south side of the altar, while the Queen passed through the north side. Both wore their crowns and bore their sceptres.

Standing before the altar the King delivered up his sceptre and golden spurs, which were laid upon the altar. The King was then divested of his royal robe of State and arrayed in a robe of purple velvet, wearing his imperial crown.

Thence the King and Queen proceeded through the choir to the west door of the church in the same way as they had come, wearing their crowns; the King bore in his right hand the sceptre with the cross and in his left the Orb which had been tendered to him in the chapel of St. Edward, whither it had been carried by an attendant. The Queen bore in her right hand her sceptre with the cross and in her left the ivory rod with the dove. All the peers walked along in solemn procession wearing their coronets. The retirement from the abbey was in the same order as the entrance.

That portion of the church known as the Chapel of Edward the Confessor, where the actual crowning occurred, is designated as "the theatre."

The King's throne—the historic old chair of St. Edward—was elevated on a dias in the centre of the theatre facing the high altar and was approached by five steps. The Queen's throne was more modern and is two steps less in height than the King's.

Magnificent embroidery covered the royal mantles of the King and Queen, in which national emblems largely figured. The supertunica, for instance, that was placed about the King's body after the anointing, is beautifully worked in roses, thistles and shamrocks in their native colors.

An interesting innovation was the introduction of various colonial emblems, such as the maple leaf of Canada, the wattle bloom of Australia and the lotus, representing India. These were worked in their native colors in the stole that was placed about George's shoulders. Both supertunica and stole were made of English manufactured cloth.

The coronation robe of the King was worn by King George IV. when he was crowned in 1821. It is a tremendous affair, being so long that six gentlemen-in-waiting were required to bear it.

The train mantle of the Queen was designed by Frederick Vigers, F. R. I. B. A. It is eighteen feet in length and three full breadths of velvet in width. Standing boldly in the centre is the crown with the genesta, the badge of the Plantagenets, from which springs a rose tree. Downward the roots are twined with a Norman fleur-de-lis; upward the shamrock and the thistle lead to the star of India and culminate in the crown of St. Edward.

As befits the symbols of power of the greatest empire on earth, the crowns of the King and Queen used in to-day's ceremony are masterpieces of the jewelers' art, resplendent with blazing gems.

King George's crown was made for the crowning of Queen Victoria in 1838, but its jewels are far older and rich in history. The great red stone in front, blazing like a lustrous eye, is the famous ruby given to the Black Prince by Peter the Cruel in 1867 and worn by Henry V. at Agincourt. It contains also the Cullinan diamond and what is known as the "inestimable sapphire" of pure deep azure more than two inches long, besides 2,926 other diamonds, 297 pearls, the whole weighing over 30 ounces.

The Queen's crown, as well as the King's, is of British workmanship. It is smaller than King George's crown, weighing only 19 ounces. In front blazes the famous Kohinoor diamond. Both are lined with purple velvet, the Queen's being faced with ermine.

And Then You Wake Up!

You see a pretty picture and you read a wondrous dope, and you call upon the Bargain Man, your heart beats high with hope, but the diamond so dazzling and the watch so very cheap, are all tied up with strings and things, and you wake up from your sleep. Yes, you stick a pin in yourself and wake up and find your way to WILSON BROS., the Scollay square Jewelers, where everyone gets a square deal, and where they carry no lemons in stock. Now you know the meaning of WILSON BROS.' motto: "A Safe Place to Trade." Our only store, next to the Big Teakettle. Open Evenings.

Were Deaf—Now Hear

Remarkable Experience of Those Dead to the World of Sound With a New Treatment for Deafness That is Wonderfully Efficient. A Multitude of Witnesses

DISCHARGING EARS, AND NOISES

Unable to get employment that she liked on account of being deaf, disheartened and discouraged from repeated failures to gain relief from hospitals and specialists, Miss Mildred Burgess, who resides at 28 Pearl st., South Framingham, yielded, after a long time, to her mother's importunities and had the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treat her for deafness. Regarding her experience she said to the writer: "Seventeen years I had been deaf in my right ear. I could hear nothing with it. There was an offensive discharge and those terrible noises that almost drove me to distraction. My left ear failed gradually, and I could see nothing before me but total deafness. I was thoroughly discouraged, as everything seemed to fail that I tried for relief, and when I did not notice any improvement in the first few treatments I received from the Osmo-Chemic Physicians I would have discontinued them, only my mother urged and persuaded me to continue. How glad I am that I followed her advice! The Osmo-Chemic Physicians stopped the discharge and ringing noises in my ears and I hear almost perfectly again."

Miss Ida Nelson resides at No. 20 Crescent st., Waltham. She says: "I had been troubled with catarrh ever since I was 5 years old; adenoids and enlarged tonsils, accompanied with deafness. I was operated upon and the adenoids and tonsils removed, but my catarrhal trouble was not any better than before. My aunt had been successfully treated by the Osmo-Chemic Physicians, as well as my cousin, Dagmar Kleist of 1000 Tremont st., Boston, who was cured of Heart Disease. They advised me to go to them for treatment. I took their advice, with the result that the Osmo-Chemic Physicians cured me of Catarrhal Bronchitis, and I hear as well as ever I did."

LAST DAYS----ONE MONTH FREE

The Osmo-Chemic Physicians, in order to demonstrate their skill in the cure of Deafness by the New Discovery, will give all patients who are deaf, who begin or renew treatment on or before June 30, one month's treatment, including all medicine, ABSOLUTELY FREE. Only 7 days remain.

WERE DEAF----NOW HEAR

Miss Frances Bernard, at No. 30 St. Cecilia st., Boston, says: "I was almost totally deaf in my right ear. Ringing, buzzing noises annoyed me greatly. The Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me. And as a result the ringing, buzzing noises are gone from my ears, and I hear perfectly again in my right ear, which I thought was lost to me forever."

Mr. Jacob B. Sulham, South Hanson, Mass., says: "I had been almost totally deaf in my left ear since 1865, in my right ear for the past four years. The Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me. Now I can hear a clock tick fifteen feet from me."

Mr. F. E. Bacon, No. 4 Rock st., Roxbury, says: "I had been totally deaf in my right ear. The Osmo-Chemic Physicians cured me."

Miss Nellie M. Brown, 33 Aberdeen st., Cambridge, says: "I was very deaf. I was treated by the Osmo-Chemic Physicians and I can hear again as well as I ever did."

Miss Nellie Donovan, 18 High st., Beverly: "I was deaf. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me, my hearing has returned."

Mrs. Margaret Kimball, 121 Oliver st., Linden: "I could not hear a sound in my left ear. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me I can hear a watch tick."

Mrs. Fannie Record, 15 Vancouver st., Boston: "I was practically stone deaf in both ears. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me I can hear and understand a lecture."

Mrs. C. S. Barker, 236 Spring st., Medford, Mass.: "I was practically stone deaf in both ears. Since the Osmo-Chemic Physicians treated me I hear perfectly again."

White of Eggs for the Hair

Whites of eggs materially help in forming a lather when used in shampooing the hair and scalp. They thicken the emulsion, and thus make a better vehicle for picking up and holding in suspension the smallest particles of dust and dirt, which are carried away finally by repeated rinsing in clean water. Birt's Head Wash contains whites of eggs, which is one of the reasons why it leaves the scalp and hair in such a delightfully clean, healthy condition after a shampoo with it.

It also contains glycerin, used everywhere for skin troubles; cocoanut oil, to prevent a dry, scaly condition and to give lustre to the hair; and a small amount of salicylic acid, which is an antiseptic that prevents the development of bacteria, putrefaction and odors.

Use Birt's Head Wash regularly and you will get from it valuable help in curing dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair and other similar troubles.

LOS ANGELES, June 22.—Thomas J. Jones, manager of Ad Wolgast, the world's lightweight champion, is in this city to-day and brings the information that his boxer is training at Matilija Springs for his bout with Owen Moran on July 4.

Promoter Coffroth, under whose direction the affair is to be staged, is very anxious that Wolgast shall do his work in or around San Francisco for the sake of the publicity the bout would receive, but Wolgast is obdurate, according to Jones, and says he likes the springs better than any place he has trained at.

Those who gave seen the pair boxing at a local gymnasium are surprised at Miss Lewis's cleverness and the amount of punishment she can take.

At the start Mason was timid about putting steam behind the punches, until Miss Lewis straightened him up with a left hook and since then Mason has been sailing in as though taking a bout as good as he has given right along.

The Rustlers won't have to bat against C. Mathewson this afternoon and that is one big thing in their favor. Mr. McGraw hasn't anything ... Ames and ... pumpkins themselves ... a sign of relief ... against Tenney's ... now.

Matty was ... last week. He lost a game ... three defeats for the season to date. He is due to lose another the month of July.

Mathewson Good Show.

If it ever is a pleasure to see the home folks licked, it's when they are licked by Mathewson. In the first place, it's a pleasure to watch him work. He doesn't waste any energy and he hesitates so little between deliveries that the game is over in less than ... only a little over an hour ... Big Six ... bases are empty and almost impossible to do so when ... Furthermore ... team when ... pitching. He lines up his defense where he wants it and he doesn't throw what the catcher signs for unless the sign agrees with his own judgment.

The Rustlers got seven safe ones off the peerless one and they almost scored on him once. A ... Snodgrass ... seventh, when it didn't seem as if any play would be made for the runner.

Lineup Changed.

The Boston lineup was again far different from the one appearing in the score cards, but the bugs were allowed to guess the names of the athletes on the Rustler side. There was no announcement except the one concerning the batteries. That sort of thing's all right for the people who know the players by sight, but it's pretty hard on the fans who aren't able to come often enough to get acquainted.

This afternoon's game ... the last on the South End ... until the sixth of July, when the Cincinnati Reds will appear here once more. Manager Tenney's boys will start to-night for Philadelphia where ... Red Dooin's Quakers in a set of four games. The Phillies have been slumping a bit lately and the Rustlers will not feel a bit bad if the slump continues a few days longer.

This trip will also take the Bostonians to New York and Brooklyn. There are postponed games to be played off and the two Sundays of rest will be welcome.

Prof. John Kling has introduced some ... to the Rustler pitchers ... a fleet ... A bat ... feels like a feather after this one one has swung around a few times. Al Mattern is enthusiastic over the stunt and says it helps him a lot. It works on the same principle as the swinging of two or three bats before going up to the plate to hit. The single bat feels much lighter and is easier to wield.

Orie Wray ... Hank Buck made his local ... in the first inning ... a couple of ... helped the ... to score three runs. After the first Hank pitched a nice game ... home run into the right field seats in the seventh for the Giants' fourth and last tally.

It isn't particularly creditable for a pitcher to allow his opponents four runs ... Hank, for a pitcher can't win unless there is at least one ... He ... enough to keep getting better.

BASEBALL CHATTER

The Detroit Tigers are not proving nearly as strong a road team as in the days when they were winning pennants. It was then their habit to come East and fatten up their percentages at the expense of the clubs in this section. They were getting beaten pretty regularly by the Western clubs, chiefly Chicago and Cleveland. It is different now. They had a hard time here in the East on their ... trip and the Eastern clubs gave them plenty of trouble on the Detroit grounds. But Cleveland, St. Louis and Chicago are easy for the Jennings outfit and are keeping it up in the van.

* * *

Tommy Leach's days as a Pirate regular appear to be numbered. It seems that Barney Dreyfuss has accused Tom of loafing. He has asked Manager Clarke to try to get rid of the great little outfielder and Tommy has expressed his willingness to be canned, saying that he cannot satisfy Pittsburgers any more. ... looked good when the Pirates were here. "Scoops" Carey, the ... is now playing centre field for the Pirates and hitting hard.

* * *

What has become of the ... Cincinnati ... New York against the deal which brought Johnny Kling to Boston? A week ago there were predictions of a big upheaval ... disruption of the National League. Nothing has been heard of those threatened catastrophies for three or four days. Nothing more will be heard of them but there will be more dire prophesies next time any big trade is pulled off, no matter what club gets the better of it.

* * *

Ofttimes a player "canned" from a club that is fighting for the pennant sees fit to knock it when he has been turned out. Not so with Joe Kling. He says ... good right now and ought to win the National League championship. And he will be perfectly satisfied if they do. John has his own opinion about his ability to play ball, but he has no criticism to hand to Manager Chance for using him in a trade. "Chance wanted an outfielder, and he had to make the deal to get one," says Boston's new catcher.

Notes Gathered Between Innings

Herzog's absence gave ... Young a chance to perform. The ... showed a decent game at short and got two hits off Matty, which is going some.

Billy Jones was in centrefield again. He made two or three nice catches and landed on "Big Six" for a two-bagger.

Harry Steinfeldt was back on the job at third and the leftfield berth was given to Scotty Ingerton. Steiny fielded perfectly and smashed out a hard double first time up.

With Mathewson on first in the ninth, Devore lifted a fly to short right. Sweeney and Miller went after it and Doc dropped it. But he escaped the charge of an error, because Sweeney picked up the ball in time to shoot it to Young, forcing Mathewson.

To-day's game winds up the Rustlers' brief June engagement on the ... They will leave to-night for Philadelphia and will also journey to New York and Brooklyn before getting back to the South End Grounds.

Kling sent a slow bounder toward third base in the seventh and beat it out. Meyers pegged wild to nail him at first and John apparently made up his mind to try for second. He ran out to the grass and fell down and was tagged before he could get up, but Umpire Finneran ruled him safe at first, saying he hadn't attempted to start toward second. The Giants kicked, but to no purpose.

NEW TRACK IS MADE PERFECT

PITTSBURG, June 22.—Rapid progress is being made in the construction of the quarter-mile running track at Forbes Field preparatory for the National Amateur Athletic Union Junior and Senior championship games that are to be held June 30 and July 1. Mike Murphy, the famous trainer of athletics at the University of Pennsylvania, has given it his undivided attention since his arrival here last Thursday morning.

The work is being pushed rapidly, and when finished Pittsburg will be able to boast of having the finest track of its kind in the world. The specifications laid down by the ... committee says the ... must be perfect in every detail and the very fact that Trainer Murphy is in entire charge of the construction guarantees this.

In speaking of the construction of the track, Murphy stated that for quality it will be unsurpassed by any other one of its kind in the world. Clay will be used as the foundation and on this a thick layer of cinders will be placed. The track will be rolled until it becomes as solid as it is possible for it to be. It must be level and no part of the track will be higher than another.

When the contestants arrive here for the big meet they will find that they are provided with the best track they have ever competed on, and it will not be the fault of those in charge of the games if records are not broken. With the athletes in the very pink of condition and a perfect track to compete on, there is no reason in the world why some of the marks that are now looked upon as unapproachable cannot be lowered.

T[illegible]

O'll never since the stars began
Their round of cosmic law,
And souls evolved in ways unsolved
And Kingdoms reached their prime
[illegible] Destiny held out to Man
A gift so full of awe
As England's crown, which she hands down
In this stupendous time.

T[illegible]

T[illegible] [illegible] crucial hour, when
[illegible] monarchs as by fire
[illegible] be more than just—
[illegible] live on bread alone
[illegible] sense of right is
[illegible] let her aspire
[illegible] love and build thereof
[illegible] everlasting Throne.

KING GEORGE AND QUEEN MARY

THE dreaming East, awake at last,
Is asking "when" and "why"?
Wait not too long nor answer wrong,
Nor in too stern a voice.
Let England profit by her past,
And with her wise reply,
Rouse hearts within her foster kin
To hope and to rejoice

TRUE wealth dwells not in things we own,
But in our use of things.
Who would command a conquered land
Must conquer first its heart.
Such might as Man has never known
And power undreamed by kings
And boundless strength would come at length
To one who used that art.

FOR now has dawned the People's Day;
A day of great unrest
Nor king nor creed can still man's need
Of time and space to grow
All lands must shape a wider way,
For this eternal quest,
And Leisure yield a larger field
Where work-worn feet may go.

THE Universe is all a-thrill
With changes imminent
The World in faith with bated breath
Holds free the Leader's place.
All wise is he whose heart and will,
At one with Time's intent,
Shall open wide doors long denied
To Mothers of the race.

ON this round globe, or, when and where
Were fitter time and scene,
For Woman's soul to reach its goal
Than now in England's realm?
Was not the crown its King will wear
Made glorious by its Queen?
And who steered straight its ship of State?
Victoria at the Helm!

KINGS have been kings by accident,
By favor and by force,
By right of birth and moral worth
And Empires rich and broad'
For England's King to-day are blent
Like rivers on one course
But ah! the light falls searching white
Down from the throne of God.

LORD of the earth and heavenly spheres,
Creator of all things
Thou who hast wrought great worlds from naught—
Give strength to England's son
Give courage to dispel those fears
That come to even kings.
And for his creed give Love's full meed.
Amen. Thy Will be done

A Successful Wife

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

By G. DORSET

Copyright, 1910, by Harper & Brothers.

PURCHASE came in and helped me get my things to rights, but he was so full of talk and so excited that I sent her away as soon as I could, and laid down and took a nap. There was to be a dinner at another hotel for Stephen. I didn't expect him home until late, and I had my dinner in the room off a tray and sat [illegible] until late, watching the streets lighting up, listening to the extras and the voices.

It was eleven when Stephen came in dog tired, fagged to death, and the sign of exhilaration I had remarked had faded away.

"Well," he said, slowly, "this is the irony of fate, isn't it? I shall carry the State, there's not much doubt of it. I shall have a rousing majority, I dare say —I shall withdraw my candidature to-morrow."

For a minute I thought he had gone crazy from too much brain-work; his voice was hoarse, his eyes fixed on me without seeing me.

"I'm not fit for the trust the country gives me, Esther." His face was gloomy as the grave and his eyes were sad like a child's.

"It's useless to tell me other men have been in positions like this—I don't care. It's useless to tell me I'm no worse than my opponent—that's his business. The tragedy of which you have told me has opened my eyes. Late as it is, I shall refuse to run!"

I went up to him, and put both hands on his shoulders.

"Stephen Kirkland, you'll do nothing of the kind!"

"My poor Esther——"

But I cut him short. "Don't poor me! I'm proud of you, every inch of you. If ever a man deserved a good place, you do. How many men, do you think, have fought out what you have fought out and conquered?"

He gazed on me pityingly.

"You are all right, Stephen, what's past and gone is past and gone. As for Miss Pagee, she would be the last to wish you to ruin your career to make up for her folly."

"Don't," he murmured—"don't!"

A Wife's Advice

It was the first time I had ever taken any voice in his affairs or given him any advice; but when I saw his career tottering, shaking on the verge of success, I couldn't help it. Senator Bellars seemed once more to say to me: "I hold you responsible for his life, Miss Carey."

"I've been a rake and a drunkard, Esther—all that if you like, but I have never been an impostor."

"Rubbish, Stephen! Haven't they put all the vile things they could think of in the papers? Have you denied them?"

"No, not one."

"Well, then, if the State elects you in spite of that—"

"Why, they'd say I bought the polls." He shook my hand off. "No, no, this is a way to atone for her death."

"Stephen," I urged, "think of your poor party, of what you stand for, of your friends, and the shame you'd bring on the situation. You can't go back now; it's too late."

"On the contrary, it would be a re[illegible] generation. They will have such a rev[illegible] as will clean politics from the boundary to Texas."

"Nonsense!" I answered, harshly. "You don't clean up politics by one man's making a fool of himself!" I was wild. Every second I expected him to ring for a bell boy, late as it was, and send some kind of extravagant message, and I could see [illegible] so far, I had [illegible] altered him. His eyes seemed to gaze back years to Paul Smith's to that lake, and to have been smitten with the passing of a ghost. "You haven't any right to your own feelings, Stephen, you aren't an individual—you're a party."

"G[illegible] your room, my dear girl," he begged. "Esther, for God's sake leave me alone. I ask it as a great favor." He had gone over to the window and sat down in the chair I had left, and I followed him and knelt down by his side and took hold of his hand.

"Stephen, do you think you owe more to that dead woman than you owe to me?"

"How do you mean, to you?"

"Why, I mean it will just plain break my heart if you give up your candidature."

A Promise

He stared at me as if he had made a discovery. "A heart to break—Esther has a heart?" . . . He had never heard me mention my personal feelings on a subject, and it was a counter-irritant—a great surprise—a dash of cold water—a real shock. He said, slowly:

"You mean to say——"

"I mean, Stephen, I am perfectly wrapped up in your career."

"Why, I didn't dream you cared, my dear girl. I never knew you even took an interest in what was going on—that is, actively."

"You thought I was content to stay in Brackettsville and have you practice law? Well, I'm not."

"I'm very much disturbed, Esther. Let me see my way clear."

And I followed up. "Why, it's not a man's past that counts for the country, it's what he can do." I had made him think of me. He was looking at me curiously, and the ghost that was dogging him and coming between him and realities drifted away.

"You ambitious—you," he wondered slowly. "You wrapped up in my career?" He leaned over and made me get up from my knees. "You mustn't kneel, Esther, but, like your namesake, you haven't pleaded in vain." He drew me down on his lap and held me close to him for a second. There was a noise in the hall, the porters were taking up a drunken politician from the bar to bed.

"We must get some rest," he said: "it will be a hard day to-morrow. And will you hand me one of those Henry Clay cigars, my dear girl?"

The voices outside—for two men had stopped in the hallway—talked for us, and I could guess a little what Stephen had been going through. I knew he had suffered that day in Carson City as he had gone about his weary campaign; I knew he had relived those days up there, and could have drawn a picture, as I could, of that flowing, breezy form, and that the lake must have struck as icy a chill to Stephen, very nearly, as it had to her.

Pretty soon he said to me, "you're right, my dear girl; that's the highest cruelty and irony of it—we can't atone; and I owe you, as you remind me, more than I owe to any one, and if to see me Governor of Nevada will give you the slightest satisfaction, my dear." . . .

It made me think of Judge Baxfield's letter; one man married another woman to give me pleasure, and now a second man was going to be Governor of a State for the same reason! I smiled, I couldn't help it, and I thought, well, if it gives either of you any pleasure to think it's for my sake—you're welcome! I don't care, as long as the things get done!

A Governor's Wife

It began to circle out wide now. Our town, near as it was to Carson City, got to be a speck, and we were far from it. Carson City turned out to be a bush for Stephen's ambition to rest on before flying higher.

Carson City was always [illegible] and I [illegible] I lived there I [illegible] I was dazed most of the time. My husband kept me busy, though; the house was full of callers—political people and secretaries and office seekers, and what not, and Miss Cornelia Purchase saved my life. No doubt it was for the reason that the Governor's office was never meant to be permanent for any husband that he himself, never liked Carson City and was sensitive to every little annoyance.

He never felt at home a single day. There is that mansion. I talked to him enough to make up for the years I had been so silent. He needed a lot of plain common sense salted down, and the little doses I gave him were disguise.

I never pretended to look after anything in the Carson City house. I gave up housekeeping of which I was getting fond; I left everything to Cornelia Purchase, and she was wonderful.

Bits of Philosophy

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

IT is going to be heaven enough for the women, when they get there, to be given garments made in one piece, and at last lose the fear that their skirts and waists are coming apart in the back.

Every woman is as patient with the faults of her sons as she is impatient with the same faults in her husband.

The only real good times some married women seem to have is in telling their [illegible] to the doctor.

There should be a lot of comfort for [illegible] worthless husband in this: When a worthless husband dies his widow wears as deep mourning as if he ranked first [illegible] the worthy ones.

DANGERS OF FAT

HOW FAT AFFECTS THE LIVER

Next to the heart, there is no organ of the body more susceptible to an abnormal increase of fatty tissue, than the liver. When the liver becomes too fat, its action is impeded, allowing the fat-making foods to make more fat than is needed for normal symmetry. The liver, clogged with excess fat, becomes inactive, and, from disease, the nature of the organ undergoes a change. Constipation, headaches, biliousness and similar local disturbances of the system are not the least of the fat man or woman's troubles, for the rolls and layers of fat on all portions of the body increase, clogging other organs, paving the way to obesity. All this can be avoided, if the proper remedy is resorted to at once. Nothing ever discovered for the removal of fat is so effective as the famous Marmola Prescription. However, from the same high authority came Marmola Prescription Tablets, containing all the elements of this sure, harmless Prescription and offering a more convenient means for reducing to normal weight at the rate of 10 to 16 oz. a day, without dieting, exercise or resulting wrinkles and flabbiness. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or the Marmola Co., 75 Monroe Ave., Detroit, Mich., at 75c the case.

Married Life the Second Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Just to Have Warren Beside Her Brings to Helen Peace and Content

IN the week that followed Helen was [illegible] very ill—critically ill. But there was little physical pain, only a [illegible] dreamy languor and weakness.

With Warren beside her, more loving and solicitous than he had been since the birth of Winifred, she was filled with a lethargy of peace and content.

After the strained anxiety and unhappiness of the past months, it was good just to lie there and know that Warren was near her, and that for the moment at least he seemed to care. That she could not long hold to this moment, she knew. The return of her strength might bring with it the return of his indifference. But she did not think of the future, of anything beyond the peace and tranquility of the present.

They had sent to St. Louis for an [illegible] for her room, and its drowsy droning seemed to lull her into an even deeper lethargy. Through the long hours she lay there weak and listless and yet dreamily happy.

Tried in Vain to Rouse Her

She realized that they were anxious—desperately anxious about her, but, as she felt no pain, neither could she feel any sense of anxiety. And it was this very lethargy which they most feared, and from which they tried in vain to rouse her. She seemed literally slipping away from them through sheer inertia and exhaustion.

Warren tried in vain to rouse her, to bring her back to an interest in life, in Winifred, in the things about her. He did not know that this strange apathy, this prolonged relaxation was but the result of months of tense strain and worry and that her whole nature was now finding rest in a lassitude so deep that it was almost hypnotic.

It was one afternoon, when she seemed more white and frail and lifeless than ever, that Warren bent over her and asked huskily:

"Helen, don't you want to get well? Is that it?"

She looked up with a faint smile. Weak as she was, she was still conscious of a thrill of joy that it was Warren—WARREN who was saying this! Her white fingers pressed lightly the strong brown hand that was holding hers. Everything had "come right" at last. He loved her now. What mattered his cruelty and the anguish of the past, as long as now he was bending over her with anxious, loving tenderness.

"Tell me, Helen," he repeated, "are you trying to slip away from us? Is that what you want to do?"

She shook her head.

"I Am Happy," She Thought

She said no word aloud, but in her heart she was saying over and over, "I am happy now—I am happy now." If only she could hold to this moment! What could she do to keep his love as she had it now?

These were some of the thoughts that were surging through her as she lay there before him, white and still, and with closed eyes. The lace on her gown was barely stirred by the faintness of her breathing.

Perhaps it was well that Warren did not know what was passing through her mind, for he would have thought [illegible]

Helen might have [illegible] herself from a window from hopeless love for him, and he would have only loathed her for what he would call her "cheap dramatic emotionalism."

But now that she was ill with pneumonia, a sickness that as far as he knew was not brought on in any way [illegible] self, he was [illegible] concern and anxiety.

It is only [illegible] that a man will [illegible] who loves him die from a broken heart, but he would be [illegible] pain from a broken finger.

And even now, ill as she was, [illegible] realize this.

In the background of her thoughts was the consciousness that if Warren ever knew this sickness was in part the result of her midnight walk in the garden and of afterward standing in the hall in her dew-drenched gown while she telephoned to him in Boston—he would [illegible] incensed. He would have for her neither love nor sympathy nor understanding.

Was Dumbly, Vaguely Grateful

In the few days he had been with her there had been no mention of the long-distance telephone call, or of the fact that he had not written. She was still too ill to talk—too ill to be excited or distressed by any reference to the past.

And she was vaguely, dumbly grateful that this was so.

Just to have him beside her, to hold his hand, to slip her own under his cuff and feel the strong muscles of his arm and the satin smoothness of his skin, to catch the faint fragrance of cigars as now and then he bent over her. To drift off to sleep and awaken and find him still there!

All this was so much—she asked for nothing more.

The Ill-Breeding of Some Well-Dressed Women

By DOROTHY DIX

ONE of the curious phases of modern social development is the utter lack of what used to be called "good manners" in women who bear all of the outer insignia of being ladies. They are beautifully gowned, perfectly groomed, obviously intelligent and educated, and of good social position, yet they are daily guilty of rudeness that would make a fishwife blush.

Primarily this disregard of that gentle consideration for the feelings of others that constitutes the very essence of ladyhood is shown in the cruelly appraising stare with which women greet each other in any public place.

It is a look as cold as ice and as merciless as the headsman's axe. It ignores nothing, it condones nothing, and woe to her whose costume cannot stand the inspection!

Daily Examples

If you doubt that women, who should have better manners, put each other through this third degree inquisition when they meet another woman, just look about you the next time you ride on a street car, or go up in an elevator at a hotel. Every woman who enters either conveyance has to face a hostile battery of feminine eyes, and run the gauntlet of being seized up from the last button on her frock to the last hairpin in her false hair, and when she gets out she knows just as accurately what the other women think of her as if they had shouted their opinion to her through a megaphone.

If she was well dressed, there was approval in their glances. If she was rouged, and marcelled, and puffed, and straight fronted up to the limit, there was admiration. If she had on a gown that was obviously the latest cry from Paris there was awe and reverence in their faces.

BUT if she had the sense, and good taste, and courage to have on a gown, and do her hair some way that suited her own needs and fancy, but that defied the mode, the sneering lips and turned-up noses proclaimed to her that she had broken all of the feminine laws and canons, and that she was cast forth into outer darkness, where there is the weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth of those who don't know what is being worn this season.

Dress Not Everything

These women object to being judged solely by their clothes, and to being put down as ignoramuses, nobodies, as being unworthy of deference or consideration merely because they do not choose to wear bobble skirts and vegetable basket hats.

They think that education, breeding, blood and literary and scientific attainments should count for as much as even an imported gown.

SHE GOT WHAT SHE WANTED

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered from a female weakness and stomach trouble, and I went to the store to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but the clerk did not want to let me have it—he said it was no good and wanted me to try something else, but knowing all about it I insisted and finally got it, and I am so glad I did, for it has cured me.

"I know of so many cases where women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I can say to every suffering woman if that medicine does not help her, there is nothing that will."—Mrs. JANETZKI, 2963 Arch St., Chicago, Ill.

This is the age of substitution, and women who want a cure should insist upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound just as this woman did, and not accept something else on which the druggist can make a little more profit.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The De Bercy Affair

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT
By GORDON HOLMES

"O H, Pauline, be brave!" said Antonio, and tears choked his voice.

After a time, without opening her eyes, she asked:

"What proofs have they?"

"They have found the daggers in his trunk."

"But I have the daggers."

"No, that woman who lived here, your supposed friend, Miss Marsh, stole the daggers from you, and Janoc secured them from her."

She moaned, but did not weep. She, who had been timid as a mouse at sight of Clarke, was now braver than the man. Presently she whispered:

"Where have they taken him to?"

"He will have been taken to the Marlborough Street police station."

After another silence she said:

"Thank you, Antonio; leave me."

Passionately he kissed her hand in silence, and went.

Another Confession

She was no sooner alone than she walked up to her room, dressed herself in clothes suited for an out-of-door mission, and went out, heedless and dumb when a wondering fellow-servant protested. She called a cab—for Marlborough Street; and now she was as calm and strong as had been her brother when he gave himself up to Clarke.

Her cab crossed Oxford Circus about ten minutes ahead of the vehicle which carried Furneaux and Osborne; and as she turned south to enter Marlborough Street, she saw Winter, who had lately visited her, standing at a corner awaiting the arrival of Furneaux.

"Stop!" Pauline cried to her driver, and she alighted.

"Well, you are better, I see," said Winter, who did not wish to be bothered by her at that moment.

"Sir," said Pauline solemnly in her stilted English, "I regret having been so unjust as to tell you that it was either Mr. Furneaux or Mr. Osborne who committed that murder, since it was I myself who did it."

"What!" roared Winter, stepping backward, and startled most effectually out of his official phlegm.

"Sir," said Pauline again, gravely, calmly, "it was not a murder, it was an assassination. One for political reasons. As I have no mercy to expect, so I have no pardon to ask, and no act to blush at. It was political. I give myself into your custody."

Winter stood aghast. His brain seemed suddenly to have curdled; everything in the world was topsy-turvy.

"So that was why you left the Exhibition—to kill that poor woman Pauline Dessarts?" he contrived to say.

"That is the truth, sir. I could bear to keep it secret no longer, and was going now to the police station to give myself up when I saw you."

Made No Move

Still Winter made no move. He stood there frowning in thought, staring at nothing.

"And all the proofs I have gathered against—against someone else—all these are false?" he muttered.

"I am afraid so, sir," said Pauline, "since it was I who did it with my own hands."

"And Mr. Osborne's dagger and flint—where do they come in?"

"It was I who stole them from Mr Osborne's museum, sir, to throw suspicion upon him."

"Oh, come along," growled Winter. "I believe I know you are lying, but this must be inquired into."

Not unkindly, acting more like a man in a dream than an officer of the law, he took her arm, led her to the cab from which she had just descended, and the two drove away together to the police station higher up the street.

Thus, and thus only, was Inspector Furneaux saved from arrest that day. Two minutes later he and Osborne passed the very spot where Pauline found Winter, and reached Poland street without interference.

Furneaux produced a bunch of keys when he ran up the steps of the house. He unlocked the door at once, and the two men entered.

Evidently Furneaux had been there before, for he hurried without hesitation down the kitchen stairs, put a key into the cellar door, flung it open, and the horse, peering wildly over his shoulder, caught a glimpse of Rosalind sitting on the ground in a corner.

She did not look up when they entered—apparently she thought it was Janoc who had come; and with fixed, mournful eyes, like one gazing into profundities of vacancy, she continued to stare at the floor. Her face and air were so pitiable that the hearts of the men smote them into dumbness.

Then, half conscious of some new thing, she must have caught sight of two men instead of the usual one, for she looked up sharply, and in another moment was staggering to her feet, all hysterical laughter and sobbings, like a dying light that flickers wildly up and burns low alternately, trying at one instant to be herself and calm, when she laughed, and the next yielding to her distress, when she sobbed.

She put out her hand to Osborne in a last effort to be graceful and usual; then she yielded the struggle, and fainted in his arms.

Furneaux produced a scent-bottle and a crushed cigar, such as it was his habit to smell, to present them to her nose.

But she did not revive, so Osborne took her in his arms, and carried her as though she were a child, up the stone steps, and up the wooden, and out to the cab.

NOT WORTHY YOUR LOVE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a gentleman for two years. He tells me he loves me better than any one else and that he would be miserable without me. He has, however, another girl friend he sees every two or three months, as she lives out of town. She will write and say she must see him, and he goes.

Recently he received word that she was coming to Boston, so he met her and left me alone and spent Sunday with her at Nantasket Beach.

Kindly advise me what I should do.

T. T.

IT is not safe to have anything further to do with this man. Any one so selfish and unkind could never make you happy.

My dear girl, you may consider yourself very fortunate to be free from such an unworthy man.

MAKE SURE YOURSELF.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-two years of age and have been acquainted for some time with a gentleman three years my senior.

I have been to places of amusement with him, and he has treated me in all respects as a gentleman should. It happens that a friend of mine knows positively about the sort of life he is leading.

He has called at my home often and I have taken a liking to him, and I know he likes me.

It seems impossible for me to believe anything ill of the young man.

Kindly give me your opinion as to what I should do. PERPLEXED.

STUDY for young man yourself and judge whether he is worthy of your friendship. Until facts are obtained from several sources, verifying hearsay, it is unjust to mistrust him or believe what is established on no definite foundation.

Be cautious and take no decided steps unless all doubts have been banished.

BOSTON HARBOR HONORS GEORGE

Boston harbor was a blaze of color to-day in honor of the coronation of King George and Queen Mary.

One of the finest decorated vessels was the King's own, the steamer Prince George of the Dominion Atlantic Steamship line, which plies between this port and Yarmouth, N. S. The Prince George was named in honor of the present King when he was a prince in Queen Victoria's reign. Its sister ship, the Prince Arthur, arrived to-day from Yarmouth, resplendent in flags and bunting.

The huge liner Franconia was a mass of color from stem to stern. Her masts carried high into the air the national code of flags, surmounted by the British emblem. Other British ships gaily decorated were the Canadian from London, Iberian from Manchester, Bohemian and Sagamore from Liverpool. Battleships at the navy yard and other craft were decorated.

$400 DAMAGES FOR R. W. SEARS

NEWPORT, June 22.—Judge Stearns made an important decision to-day in the Superior Court when he charged a jury that a newspaper photographer had a perfect right to take a picture of anyone in the street. The jury returned a verdict of $400.

The case was that of Richard W. Sears, the widely known photographer of the Boston AMERICAN, who brought a suit for damages against Henry P. Walker, charging that Walker attacked him and injured his camera, as well as his feelings, when he was taking a picture at a wedding on March 14 last.

"I charge you, gentlemen of the jury," said Judge Stearns, "it is your duty to bring in a verdict for the plaintiff Sears. Sears has a perfect right to take a picture of me or anyone else, and Walker has no right to take the law into his own hands. The plaintiff has a right to receive damages for the assault and personal injury."

Is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

700 LEAVE CITY SCHOOLS TO-DAY

With interesting programs of oratory and music, graduating exercises were held in three Boston schools to-day, when more than 400 graduates received diplomas. Four more schools will have their exercises to-night when 300 more young men and women will be graduated.

The various school halls, where the programs were carried out, were decorated in the colors of the respective classes, and the girls wearing pretty dresses and the boys looking their best presented scenes that recalled memories to proud parents and friends.

There were 221 graduates to-day at the Boston Girls' High School, the class being one of the largest ever graduated from there. The program was of unusual interest and included selections by the schools orchestra and glee club. The presentation of diplomas was made by George E. Brock, chairman of the School Committee. An attractive feature was an address by Sarah Louise Arnold, dean of Simmons College. The class song, written by Harriet C. Bonney, to the tune, "Fair Harvard," was well received.

One hundred and twelve young women, most of whom plan to become school teachers, were graduated to-day from the Boston Normal School. Diplomas were presented to the prettily-dressed graduates by Joseph Lee, member of the School Committee. The program included addresses by the Honorable David Snedden, Commissioner of Education, and Wallace C. Boyden, headmaster. "Queen of Night," "Lullaby," and "The Dance of the Fairies" were sung by the members of the graduating class.

Joseph Lee Gives Diplomas.

The program at the West Roxbury High School to-day, where 74 young men and women received diplomas as rewards for their good work at the school, included music, essays and addresses. Joseph Lee of the school committee presented the diplomas to the graduates. The presentation of the class gift to the school was made by James J. Keating, president of the graduating class. There was an address by George A. O. Ernst. The program contained a list of additional honors conferred upon the following members of the last year's class: William B. Kelleher, Hugh C. Stone, Minna A. Bretschneider and Lillian L. Lowden.

At the graduation exercises tonight of the Boston High School of Practical Arts the graduating class consists of 39 young women. An address on the "Class of 1911" will be given by Miss Alice Meehan, president of the class. Miss Amy Allbright will be mistress of ceremonies. The program will include addresses by Mrs. Ellor Carlisle Allbright, Carl Dreyfus, Frederick P. Fish and Herbert S. Weaver. The presentation of the class gift will be made by Miss Rosemary Doe, and the acceptance will be by Miss Helena Burke of the class of 1912. Dr. Thomas F. Leen will present the diplomas. There will also be songs by the chorus.

Diplomas will be given to the following graduates:

Amelia M. Adams, Amy M. Allbright, Bessie L. Barber, Pauline R. Bayne, Isabel R. Best, Barbara M. Blaisdell, Geraldine N. Caswell, Hazel G. Cunningham, Marion I. Davis, Rosemary Doe, Mary E. JOHN P. FEENEY WEDS TO-NIGHT

Don't read this. It's a secret. No one knows about it and nothing is coming out in the papers about it until to-morrow.

Then all the papers will contain a nice little notice that John P. Feeney, former Mayor of Woburn and one of the best known Democrats of the State, was quietly married at the Hotel Lenox to Miss Margaret Hagan, his boyhood sweetheart. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Lawrence J. Slattery of Cambridge, the bride's pastor.

It's to be a very quiet affair, in fact, if Mr. Feeney and his bride began to send out invitations to all their friends they would have to hire Mechanics Hall to hold them all. So just a few friends of the bride and groom will witness the ceremony in the Hotel Lenox to-night and attend the wedding supper.

Mr. Feeney and his bride-to-be are natives of Woburn and grew up there together. In 1890 they attended night school together. Then Mr. Feeney studied law while Miss Hagan studied stenography. It was at this time that Mr. Feeney, a graduate from law school and only twenty-four years old, startled Woburn by becoming its Mayor. He was Mayor in 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905 and 1908. During this time Miss Hagan was very prominent in amateur theatricals and was a leader in the younger social set of which the Mayor was a part.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STOCKS SHOW BIG PRESSURE

NEW YORK, June 22.—Extreme heaviness characterized the stock market at the opening to-day, the pressure of the past two days being more pronounced than at any time yet. Stocks were offered at concessions and losses ranging from fractions to more than one point were recorded. Practically the entire list shared in the opening decline.

In some quarters it was held that the crop report was the potential factor, although in others the slump was attributed solely to manipulation. The federal court decision at Wilmington ordering the Dupont Powder Company dissolved as an alleged trust undoubtedly added to the pessimistic sentiment.

The copper group was among the weakest of all. Amalgamated receded more than a point in a few minutes trading after having opened ⅝ off. American Smelting was off ⅛ at the opening and went lower. Utah and Tennessee coppers also suffered fractional declines. Steel acted sympathetically, moving downward ⅛.

In the first few minutes of trading St. Paul and Union Pacific sold off materially and Steel went down ⅜ below the first loss. Atchison opened unchanged. Southern railway was an exception, opening up ⅛.

The curb market was dull and listless. There was no market in London owing to the coronation.

FAST THREE IN FALL RIVER RACE

By J. C. KERRISON.

Harry Cobe, who with the Jackson car won seventh place in the 500-mile race at Indianapolis, will be one of the star features at the Fall River race meet on Saturday afternoon next. He will be pitted against Neil Whalen, who drove a Pope-Hartford at Indianapolis on that same date, while Ray Gilhooley, with the Peerless, will form the third member of the trio. In this race Whalen will drive a Palmer-Singer.

Manager Corbet announces that the track at Fall River is in very fine shape, and with this event, together with the seven regular events, will make some interesting work.

In the hill-climb at Poland Springs, Maine, on Saturday last, three Velie stock roadsters rendered a particularly good account of themselves. George Rodney Wallace, Jr., with his Velie broke all records for a car of his class, and he also captured the principal event for stock cars, listing from $1,600 to $2,000. Paul Moulton of Brookline took first in the $2,000 class, while Morton Luce in a $2,000 Velie rendered excellent work.

Manager Trudeau of the Mount Pleasant Hotel, Bretton Woods, is in Boston to-day consulting with several of the birdmen, looking towards the holding of an aero meet in Bretton Woods early this Fall. There is ample opportunity for the making and ending of flights in Bretton Woods, and as this famous Summer resort has ever maintained the lead in every branch of sports, it would seem as though an aero meet there would be successful.

Now that Harry Atwood has made his tri-State run, it will be interesting indeed to learn who will be the first man to make a flight from far-famed Bretton Woods in the heart of the White Mountains. It is within the realm of possibilities that a flight will be made in Bretton some time this Summer.

There is now at the hotel in Bretton Woods a trophy valued at $200, which is to be awarded to the operator who shall take the first balloon or aeroplane to Bretton Woods.

BOSTON'S CULTURE IS CANNED, SAYS PASTOR

Rev. O. P. Gifford, D. D., pastor of the Brookline Baptist Church, thinks that Boston's culture is in the past tense. Writing in this week's issue of Zion's Herald, a Methodist newspaper, about Boston, he says, among other things: "Boston, with all her boast of culture is largely in the past tense. Boston philosophy and theology are canned goods, bearing the label of Emerson, Parker and Channing. The mountain ranges of past greatness send down streams laden with the silt of dead thinkers."

DALE GIRL DOESN'T LIVE IN ROXBURY

In connection with the suicidal attempt made yesterday by Esther D. Thompson in the County Courthouse it was stated that her arrest was the result of a story told by Maude Dale, a fourteen-year-old girl of Roxbury. The police who gave this information made an error in the address of the Dale girl. She does not live at No. 16 Quincy street, Roxbury, nor is she known there.

Pianos and Musical Instruments.

THE
HENRY F. MILLER
PLAYER-PIANO

is the most wonderful player-piano in the world. This is because it is the

ONLY PLAYER-PIANO

that allows the operator to display his own personal touch as though playing by hand. In other player-pianos the control of musical expression is sought by mechanical devices—with the result that the music sounds "mechanical."

In the HENRY F. MILLER PLAYER-PIANO the "touch" of the operator passes directly to the piano action, thus realizing the long-sought desideratum in player pianos—a player-piano that does not sound mechanical.

Until you have heard the new 88 note

HENRY F. MILLER PLAYER-PIANO

you can have no conception of the artistic possibilities of player-piano music.

We invite everyone interested (whether possible buyers or not) to come and listen to this wonderful instrument at our

Reciprocity, and How It Does Not Threaten Our Fisheries

One of the best things about the Reciprocity discussion is the education it not alone provides, but compels. You cannot study Reciprocity without coming by a broadcast deal of learning.

It is good that this is so, for while these new-found-facts have all of the pleasing freshness of discoveries, they serve also to fatten and augment and round out your education.

The anti-Reciprocity forces—VIDELICET, the Lumber Trust and the Wood Pulp-Pulp Wood Trust—feeling for recruits, raise the woeful cry of bankruptcy to the farmer, the fisherman, the dairyman and scores of others in the United States. Reciprocity will be a trade upas in the malign shadow of which our toilers on land and sea must dwindle, peak, pine and pass away. Also the Lumber Trust and the Wood Pulp-Pulp Wood Trust—for, with a last word, they are all there is to anti-Reciprocity, furnishing the ammunition, firing the guns in pointing out the poisonous character of Reciprocity, deal only in glittering generalities. They simply cry "Bogie Man!"

Naturally, you are not wholly convinced. Reciprocity as a trade agreement is recommended by Mr. Laurier and President Taft. Neither is trying to trap the other, since, by the terms of Reciprocity as they arranged it, either side can end it whenever either side sees fit. In brief, there is every reason to know that both President Taft and Mr. Laurier worked intelligently and in a spirit of honest prudence, and therefore you are disinclined to run away from and reject Reciprocity merely because some trust—finding its robberies threatened—sets up the frantic cry of "Bogie Man!"

Seek the truth and you will find by light of the figures that Reciprocity does not threaten either the farmer, the fisherman or the man of butter and eggs. You will find that the Canadian farm price for oats, hay, wheat, horses, cattle, sheep, lambs, poultry, butter and eggs is usually as high, and sometimes higher, than in the United States. You will find that the wages of farm labor and the values of farm lands are higher in Canada than in the United States. And finally you remember that with only 7,000,000 of the Canadians, there are 92,000,000 of you.

We are left wondering—in view of iron-bound figures and statistics not to be denied—how free trade between Canada and the United States to the limits set by Reciprocity can imperil the United States. It would lower the price of lumber, lower the price of pulp wood and wood pulp, and so lower the price of paper. But that is what you want, and what every honest man wants. And Reciprocity would open a market for American corn—a market that would buy an annual $50,000,000 worth of corn where it now buys but $16,000,000. By this time you begin to understand why the Lumber Trust and the Wood Pulp-Pulp Wood Trust are so at hateful war with Reciprocity, as well as make out those corn-market and cheaper-lumber, cheaper-paper reasons why you yourself should support it.

Again, the Lumber Trust and the Wood Pulp-Pulp Wood Trust are singularly sure that the upas tree of Reciprocity will blight our American fisheries. The Canadian fisherman, flooding with his pauper-caught fish every American market, is to drive the American fisherman from the ocean.

In view of this promised disaster, consider the returns. The whole catch of the Canadian fisheries for 1908, measured in money, was only $25,451,094. If we had taken it all and eaten it all, it would have cost the 92,000,000 of us less than forty cents a head. It would have left never an ache in either of our purses or our stomachs.

As a matter of encouraging fact, we ourselves produced $54,000,000 worth of oysters, clams, crabs and lobsters alone during 1908, or more than double the dollar value of the entire product of the seas for Canadians. Canada exported $22,444,767 worth of fish, of which we took and paid for our share $8,162,728. Also $3,342,870 of that $8,162,728 we paid for in fish. Had we bought and eaten all of the fish which both Canada and ourselves brought gasping to the top of the water it would have meant an annual outlay for every one of us of about eighty-three cents.

The American fisherman must be "protected"! Republican doctrine teaches that the "protection" is to be determined by the difference in the cost of production. There is reason to think that it costs an American less to catch a fish than it costs a Canadian.

The only competitor of the Canadian fisherman is the American fisherman. So much, too, was the latter getting the upper hand of the former in the Canadian market that Canada, in an extraordinary expression of "protection," had to come to the rescue. This she did by paying one-third of the express charges on all shipments of Canadian-caught fish from her maritime provinces to such inland cities as Ottawa, Toronto, Montreal and Quebec. The American fisherman had come hunting the Canadian fisherman in every one of these markets, and had not only hunted him, but treed him and ran him out on a limb. To save the Canadian fishermen from the American fisherman the Ottawa government paid those express charges of one-third. Also, it worked. The year before that one-third express payment went into effect the Americans exported to the Canadian market 9,168,000 pounds of fish. The Canadian government stepped in and paid that express charge of one-third, and the American exportation of fish into Canada dropped to 761,000 pounds!

To look into the fishery figures of Canada and the United States is to nail another anti-Reciprocity lie—a lie which it cost the Lumber Trust and the Wood Pulp-Pulp Wood Trust something to invent and something more to disseminate. Reciprocity threatens no one in the matter of fish. It will be a good thing for the fish catcher, a better thing for the fish eater.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

POSTAL ECONOMY—HOW?

Editor AMERICAN:

In a recent issue you gave Mr. Hitchcock great praise for wiping out a large postal deficit. This article seems to nullify much that has been said heretofore in criticism of the said gentleman as a politician.

Now, it would be interesting to know how this was accomplished, and how much of the deficit claimed was real and how much fictitious.

It certainly was not brought about by cutting down overcharges by the railroads, or by throttling the Express Trust, or by diminishing the franking privilege; nor was it done by increasing the rates on periodicals. We would like to know how this was done?

Publicity is the watchword now, and it is the right of the public to know the facts and have the figures that will show how this result was accomplished. Mr. Hitchcock has never been known as an active exponent of publicity, but rather seems to prefer methods of secretiveness, and thus the required figures may not be available.

FLYING FOREIGN FLAGS

Editor AMERICAN:

Is it an offence against the laws of the United States or a breach of international law for any foreigner to fly the flag of his or her country over any property which he or she may own here, providing the two nations are not at war or there are no strained relations between them?

Great Possibilities in Chamber of Commerce's European Tour

The Future of Boston and of Other New England Cities to Be Benefited by the Long Experience of the Older Cities of Europe—American's Special Representative Along.

The present tour of Europe by Boston business men under the auspices of the Boston Chamber of Commerce is fraught with greater possibilities for the commercial and industrial good of this city and all of New England than any similar movement that has taken place in this section of the country in many years.

It indicates that at last the business men of the greatest port in America have WAKED UP. It shows that they MEAN BUSINESS.

Probably every one of the Boston men who sailed for Liverpool on the Carmania from New York last Saturday—and the business men who joined them from other cities of the United States—have written this trite sentence in their copy-books at school:

By errors corrected true progress is made.

Europe is an old country. The business, industrial and social problems that have been troubling this country for years have confronted the OLDER COUNTRY for centuries. Big fortunes and lives of conscientious endeavor have been given to work out their solution.

The business men of Boston have shown good judgment in thus taking advantage of the REAL PROGRESS that has been made in Europe as a basis for improvement here.

In some of the big foreign cities which the Americans will visit it will be found that every man is not obsessed with the one desire to gather in the almighty dollar. They have found out in Europe what some of America's multi-millionaires were surprised to learn, that MONEY ISN'T EVERYTHING.

But the most important thing about the visit, probably, is that the business men of this and other cities are WILLING and ANXIOUS to learn about the great problems of city life where thoughtful, conscientious men have been at work on them since long before there were any great cities in the United States.

The European visitors will be gone two months. They will visit Liverpool, London, Paris, Berlin, Brussels, Munich and many other great cities. The business men have made extensive preparations in these cities for the entertainment and enlightenment of their guests. A number of important conferences have been arranged at which the big civic questions of the day will be discussed. These discussions will be taken down by a stenographer so that they will be available later for reference.

In addition to these advantages of this Boston Chamber of Commerce tour it will stimulate an interest in the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce that is to be held in Boston next year. Boston men are determined to make this the MOST IMPORTANT INDUSTRIAL MEETING ever held in America.

All these things promise much toward bringing this city IN THE IMMEDIATE FUTURE to that point of commercial supremacy to which Boston is entitled because of her splendid harbor and commercial and industrial opportunities.

People at home will want to know how the visitors in foreign lands are getting along. The Sunday AMERICAN has had that in view and has sent Fred J. McIsaac, of its staff, as a special representative to accompany the tourists from the start to the finish of their trip. The AMERICAN is the only newspaper that has a special representative with the delegation of business men. Mr. McIsaac's letters will appear regularly soon after he reaches the other side.
